Unbelievable Made Real Russia, Nearest Neighbor France Knows Business We Still Spend

By Arthur Brisbane

YESTERDAY in New York, where this was written, millions were waiting for Post and Gatty to land, after flying around the northern half of the world in nine days. Mayor Walker had ready a good speech, fine reception, and elaborate luncheon. The Post-Gatty achievement will do more to stimulate flying than anything since Lindbergh's feat.

It is hard to realize what it means to fly across the Atlantic ocean, and the European continent, over Siberia, on from Asia to Alaska, and back across the American continent to New York, all in nine days. The impossible has been made real.

In connection with the Post-Gatty flight, Gen. William Mitchell, head of our fliers during the big war, reminds you how near Russia is to us.

"After Mexico and Canada, Russia is our nearest neighbor, Behring Strait, 52 miles wide, is a bridge between Asia and America. Two islands in the middle, called the Diomedes, are about six miles apart. Our territorial waters touch each other."

General Mitchell adds:

"Our next nearest neighbor is Japan. The distance from the northernmost Philippine island, called the Bashee Rocks, to Botel Tobago, off the southern end of Formosa, is only 60 miles."

Half the population of the world lives in Asia, and that makes our territorial closeness to that big continent important.

In diplomacy, disarmament conferences, etc., the British easily "put it over" the United States. Lord Balfour, or MacDonald, with equal facility, lets us know what England wants and then gets it.

But when it comes to strict BUSINESS diplomacy, France can outbit Great Britain and the United States combined.

In connection with President Hoover's moratorium, if France gets what she wants, she will continue collecting from Germany, and paying the United States, and the difference in her favor will amount to enough to balance the French budget.

However, the American worm may turn unexpectedly.

Rumors from Paris indicated that the Hoover moratorium may go through, leaving the French out. On that basis, France would continue paying the United States and collecting from Germany.

Wall Street, recently as nervous as a bride on the wedding morn, did not know quite what to think yesterday. United States Steel, which had sadly sagged down to 90, climbed vivaciously upward, to close at 103¼.

Wall Street expects some happy solution of the moratorium problem.

Bankers tell you that the people draw about $120,000,000 to spend as "extra money" on the Fourth of July.

The banks are able to stand the drain, having more money than they know what to do with anyhow. And besides, during the month of June this country gathered in $153,000,000 in gold, the largest amount ever received in one month.

There is plenty of money to lend, "call money" has been lent at the rate of 1½ per cent a year, through June.

The difficulty is to get money to start factories, and other things that use money.

Boys just out of West Point are busy with anti-aircraft defense, staying on the ground, shooting at airplanes that obligingly come by towing targets. That means nothing.

Moscow says Russians are making their own airplane engines, concentrating on 300 and 450 horsepower motors, and constantly increasing their air strength.

West Point and Annapolis boys should fly up in the air and learn to fight there. Shooting on the ground won't do much good.

The Russians in charge of aircraft designing have an interesting person named Kalinun. In Russia's civil war he was captured by white Russians, opposed to Bolsheviks, and ordered to fly one of their planes to a certain point. A "white" officer sat in the rear cockpit with a pistol at Kalinin's head to make sure that he would obey orders.

Kalinin looped the loop, dropped the passenger and gun to the ground and flew back to the red Russian lines.

Alfredo Paresi, who baked "Italian bread" for a living, was found in a bed with automobile shot through the chest, right side and back. He had defied a "racket" in the flour business, and is dead.

Rackets in labor unions increase. Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, says it may be necessary to call out 40,000 members of the union "to rid the industry of its gangsters." One difficulty in the clothing trade is that some em-

WILD TRIBUTE TO FLIERS

1 KILLED, 2 WOUNDED IN HOLDUP

Bandit Slain, Rent Collector Shot, Janitor Beaten in North End

A robber wounded a realtor during a holdup in the North End today and was shot dead by an unidentified bystander as he fled the scene.

The shooting, a parallel to police, occurred in a tenement house in Holden ct., just off Commercial st.

Edward Beck, Jr., of Holmes lane, Milton, collecting rents for Meredith & Grew, and Frank Colabelli, his assistant, were beaten unconscious with revolver butts by two gunmen who fled on foot.

They grappled with the robbers.

Beck was shot in the right ankle. Colabelli was felled by a blow on the head from one gun and he bit his assailant in the hand and forced him to flee.

BANDIT SHOT DEAD

The robber who shot Beck snatched $50 from his coat pocket, overlooking $850 in another pocket, and dashed down the alley on the heels of his confederate with Beck in pursuit.

As he reached the sidewalk a second shot was fired and the second bandit, clutching a gun in one hand and the stolen $50 in the

LONG SHOT WINS FIRST RACE

By HENRY DISKEN

Rockingham Park, N. H., July 2—Chica Guinea, J. A. Coburn's two-year-old maiden, at 14½, registered a smart victory in the first event on the card here today.

Twelve vied for the honors and turning into the stretch the fast closing field left the issue in doubt right up to the finish line. Bunting Lad came from far behind and was just nosed out of second place by the lucky Blue Jacket.

In the second race Marabou won, Perfect Alibi was second and Kitty Cat third. Eight went to the post in the second, a six-furlong dash for three-year-olds and up. Perfect Alibi, on his fine effort of yesterday, received plenty of attention as the horses paraded.

Wingfield had them off to a perfect start. Perfect Alibi on top opened up a wide gap. The winner came fast in the stretch to win going away. Ebony Prince was shuffled back.

New York, July 2—New York, and the millions who are a part of it, gave to two tired men today the spectacular sort of welcome which is reserved for spectacular guests.

Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, back after girdling the globe in less than nine days, found New York at its peak of enthusiasm. Perched in an automobile, they made a circuit of the city, which probably was only slightly less exciting than the flight itself.

There were crowds all along the route—how many hundreds of thousands, or even millions, no one dared estimate. There was the usual cheering, the sirens, and quantities of ticker tape and torn newspapers tossed from the windows of the financial district.

AROUSED BY CHEERS

Even before the fliers were out of bed at 9:30 o'clock this morning, a crowd had collected around the doors of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, their headquarters. When they finally made their appearance in the lobby, remarking they had slept "fine," they were applauded by a hundred guests.

Outside 2000 more persons had collected and set up cheers.

HERCULES SUES DODGE HEIRESS

Suit for $25,000 was entered today by Galen Gough college strongman, from Kentucky, against Mrs. Virginia Dodge Taylor, Buck Fry heiress who attempted suicide last Saturday in the Charles River.

Gough charges "civil conspiracy and tortuous assault," according to his counsel, Attorneys Edward Violin and Max Singer.

They said Mrs. Taylor met Gough at a Revere Beach sideshow soon after the season opened and, impressed by his feats of strength, promised to help him get into vaudeville.

RAZOR PLOT CHARGED

Gough and counsel assert Mrs. Taylor conspired to lure him into a Columbus ave. restaurant, where he was attacked with a razor by Charles Merriman, a Negro, who has been held in $5000 for Suffolk

The Life Story of WILEY POST, GLOBE GALLOPER

By LEON H. DURST

FROM FARMHAND TO WORLD-FAMOUS FLIER —that's the story of Wiley Post, told in an exclusive series by Leon Durst, Associated Press correspondent, and starting in the Boston Evening American today.

The epic of this boy, who rode plows and tractors on a ranch, antiquated planes on "barnstorming" tours and, finally, a mighty flying steed circling the globe at a dizzy pace, overshadows the stories of fictional heroes.

"Wiley Post, Globe Galloper," is the title of his life story, a series of eight stories, one a day, beginning today.

Behind every great undertaking there always is a personality, a man whose unflagging zeal weaves the various phases together and explains the success or failure of the project. In world-circling record flights this holds true and in seeking the story behind the story of the breath-taking ride of "The Winnie Mae of Oklahoma" all trails eventually lead to Wiley Post.

A Texas born farm boy who whittled out models of airplanes in the days when flying was only something to read about in the newspapers, Post has kept his eyes on his goal as unswervingly as he kept the "Winnie Mae" on the course plotted by navigator Harold Gatty.

N. Y. GIVES WORLD'S CHEERS TO RECORD-BREAKING FLIERS

LITTLE SLEEP FOR PAIR AFTER 8-DAY FLIGHT

when the two crossed the sidewalk to their automobile. Some of the onlookers made a rush to close in on them, apparently wanting to shake their hands.

For a moment the police line gave, but it was reformed quickly and spectators were pushed back into their places.

It required 12 motorcycle patrolmen, with sirens blowing, to clear a lane across town to North River, where the party boarded the Macom for the trip to the Battery.

WIVES FOLLOWED THEM

The fliers rode in the first car with Dr. John H. Finley, chairman of the mayor's welcoming committee. They were followed by a second automobile carrying Mrs. Post and Mrs. Gatty and other members of the reception committee.

At the foot of Forty-fourth st., along the North River, another crowd collected and shouts went up as the men appeared. Dockworkers, longshoremen and the crew of the Leviathan, docked at an adjoining pier, stopped work to join in the celebration.

Post and Gatty grinned and waved responses.

Men, women and children yelled themselves red in the face as the motorcade streaked along. It looked like another Lindbergh demonstration in the making—an accurate comparison, for once.

TANGLE OF TICKER TAPE

The party arrived at City Hall by way of lower Broadway where a heavy downpour of ticker tape slowed their progress. Crowds in the park in front of City Hall threatened to become unmanageable, but police held them.

Mayor Walker welcomed the men in the flag draped aldermanic chamber while military and police escorts stood at attention in the plaza below. The mayor said:

"When you left Roosevelt Field, your ship was known as the Winnie Mae. When you got over Russia, I think it was decided that the name had become Winnie Must. And then when you landed back at Roosevelt Field last night we knew that the name was Winnie Did."

More seriously he added:

"You've written another line, yes, another page, into history and science."

Post replied:

"It's entirely beyond words for me to express the gratitude we feel to Mayor Walker and the citizens of New York for their welcome to us."

MEDAL FOR EACH

F. C. Hall, backer of the flight, told the mayor how much he appreciated the welcome, including his daughter, Mrs. Winnie Mae Fain of Long Beach, Cal., in his thanks.

Then Mayor Walker pinned medals on the fliers while the "Star-Spangled Banner" was played.

Outside City Hall the party posed for photographs and proceeded triumphantly to the Ritz-Carlton, where the mayor's luncheon was held in honor of the fliers and their wives.

The entertainment will end with a dinner tonight at which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will be one of the speakers. The fliers will be presented checks and a solid silver globe showing the route of their flight by airplane manufacturers.

THEY'RE OPTIMISTIC

"We just got 15 hours' sleep during the flight," said Post. "Now we'll do some serious sleeping."

(Post told a pal confidentially it was only seven hours).

Serious sleeping. A couple of optimistic heroes.

The suns that rose to the skies after the world-girdlers shot their plane to earth at Roosevelt Field at 8:47 p. m. grew to a national roar of acclamation as the sun rose today.

Reception committees, interviewers, photographers, radio broadcasters did not let the nine-day flying wonders fall into bed until 2 a. m. this morning.

A lone blue-white plane with history written all over it streaked out of the west as a pink and purple sky was beginning to turn into black night.

The Winnie Mae banked twice around the field as 15,000 persons yelled and vibrated.

The round-the world plane had barely finished a perfect landing when the riot was on.

The crowd moved hesitatingly against the chain of police. Then it charged. The mob surged almost against the whirring propeller.

The policemen failed left and right. The mob kept on surging. One enthusiast held aloft a red flaming torch. A policeman knocked it from his hand and wildly tossed it into the crowd. The police were using their clubs—even against the United States customs officials, who had come out on the field to clear the flying travelers.

Wiley Post climbed out of his cockpit. Sparks from photographers' flashlights endangered the plane. Harold Gatty clambered wearily onto a wing. They both looked tired and nine days weary.

Police motorcycles charged into the crowd. Women—and men—screamed. The unbruised cheered. They had to help the two fliers to the ground, so tired were they. A flying wedge of cops formed and preceded by the motorcycles fought their way to the field operations office.

The young and pretty wife of Post kissed her husband. She was caught in the riot.

POLICE CHARGE CROWD

Afterwards she said that all her husband had said to her was:

"Hello."

Then she added:

"But he kissed me."

She also said:

"I was afraid the crowd was going to tear my clothes off me and I told Wiley I didn't want him to go into vaudeville."

From building to building the police rushed the two fliers with the crowd pursuing relentlessly. They tried decoying—a make-believe dash here and there and a false start for New York. But you couldn't fool the crowd.

Into the hangar where the sturdy Winnie Mae rested after her gallop around the earth, the fliers were taken. The crowd surged in there and as the fliers talked briefly over a radio microphone they were almost stifled by the crush and heat.

Mrs. Post fainted.

Her husband and his fellow-flier looked as pale as moonlight.

They begged for water.

"What was the worst part of your trip?" Gatty was asked.

"This is the very worst part," he smiled wryly.

The police were shouting for more water. F. C. Hall, backer of the flight, was being clubbed. A member of the mayor's committee rescued him.

When they got the fliers into an automobile, Gatty's clothes were torn. It was very hot but Post was shivering and asked for a covering somebody gave him a coat.

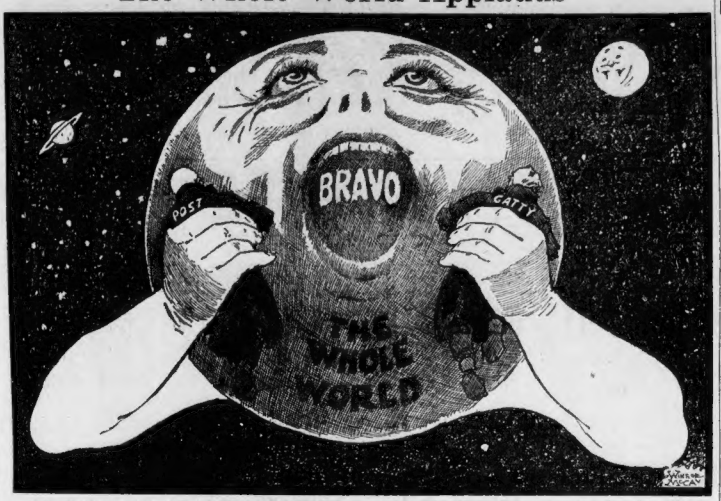
Fliers Started With $34 and Had Some Left

New York, July 2 (INS)—Here's a hint on how to spend your vacation:

Wiley Post and Harold Gatty started out to fly around the world less than nine days ago. They took $34 with them.

They are back today, and some of the $34 is still with them.

The Whole World Applauds



THE FEAT OF POST AND GATTY, intrepid American fliers, was not only spectacular but wondrous in the highest degree. Their girdling of the globe in eight days, sixteen hours has the charm of an artistic performance, for it was such a complete thing.

* * *

Magellan circumnavigated the globe in three years; the United States Army planes took six months to fly it in 1924; the Graf Zeppelin made it in twenty-two days and now the Winnie Mae in eight days, sixteen hours.

"What men can imagine, they can do," and the time of the Winnie Mae will be reduced before long.

From New York, Post and Gatty flew the Atlantic, Europe, Siberia's wastes, the Arctic fastnesses, and from Alaska down across the North American continent.

* * *

It was a precise flight, skilfully planned by men of hard-headed intelligence. Engine, brains and hearts worked in magnificent unison. The adventure was done for the sheer joy of it. Neither the fliers nor their backers stood to make any profit.

Their flight is a testimony to the courage and imagination of man, and is the most epochal in the chronicles of aviation.

NOME HOP HARDEST, FLIERS REVEAL

Bad Oil and Sparkplugs Cause Trouble in Siberia

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

New York, July 2—Wiley Post and Harold Gatty discussed their globe-circling flight with Universal Service last night. As the fliers talked, they drank glass after glass of water, all the while pacing the floor of an anteroom in the Ritz Carlton Hotel.

The interview opened when Post said:

"Say, Gatty, what day is this?"

Gatty—"I don't know."

Reporter—"It's Wednesday."

Post—"Well, we made it in less than ten days. We took off on Tuesday, didn't we?"

Reporter—"Unofficially the time was 8 days, 15 hours and 51 minutes."

Gatty—"Fine time. Post did all the flying."

Post—"I got tired over Siberia, though. It was the third day out. After that I got better, and from then on, it wasn't much at all."

Reporter—"How did it affect you, being over so much strange land?"

ALL LIKE OKLAHOMA

Post—"It didn't affect us at all. As a matter of fact, it was like being over Oklahoma. I kept it off my mind and didn't want to think of it.

"But we did have some trouble and had to think where we were. Over Khabarovsk, Siberia, we had a little trouble. We had some Russian sparkplugs that we got in Moscow, and they were missing badly. But we fixed them up easily when we landed at Khabarovsk.

"Then we had more trouble. We got some bad oil at Khabarovsk, but it didn't get into the spark plugs, because we ran the motor too fast in the test. We got new oil that was good."

Here Gatty took up the talking, as Post sipped water, saying:

"From Berlin to Moscow the rain bothered us a lot. It fell fast and was thick. That was one place where we did some blind flying. We were glad to see Moscow."

Asked when they made their best speed, Gatty spoke up:

"On our second lap, across the Atlantic."

PACIFIC HOP RISKIEST

They were asked what they considered the most hazardous stretch of the flight. Post said:

"The worst lap was from Khabarovsk to Nome. Most of that was blind flying (they estimated they covered 2600 miles in that flight)."

The flight wasn't all "roses," as Gatty put it, saying:

"We had several close calls. The weather was bad and sometimes the plane missed fire in the fog. Then we got stuck in the mud at Blagovestchensk. The soldiers offered to pull us out with a tractor and horses But there were plenty of men around and we got them to pull us out by hand."

Post interrupted, saying:

"The last part of the hop to Chicago was the longest. We had everything to put up with. The weather was bad and there was a lot of rain and fog. In fact it was rotten."

Then Post added:

"It's pretty hard to say what brought us through as successfully, but certainly we had a lot of luck."

DEAFENED BY MOTOR

Post was asked how fast they flew. He cupped a hand to his ear, signifying he couldn't hear well. Gatty spoke up, saying:

"You see, Wiley was directly behind the motor in an open cockpit and naturally he was deafened.

"But I was inside the cabin, completely out of view of Wiley and I could hardly hear the motor. I can even hear whispers.

"Our navigation instruments worked fine—much better than we could have possibly hoped for. Our speed was more than 150 miles an hour, but I haven't checked accurately in my log yet.

"We covered about 16,500 miles.

LAST LAP BEST

Post had finished another glass of water. He said:

"Gatty told me where we were most of the time. He was that important to me.

"The most interesting part of the flight was getting back to New York. This is a great town, giving us such a reception.

"But we had more trouble in New York and Cleveland with customs men than we had in Russia. They kept us waiting in the plane."

NO MOVIE CONTRACTS

The customs men, it was learned, held the pilots in the plane five minutes at Roosevelt Field while the plane was inspected.

It was suggested that Post and Gatty would go on the stage or into the movies. Said Post:

"Us? Not us."

They laughed. But maybe, they said, they'd lecture.

F. C. Hall, Oklahoma millionaire who backed the flight, said that Post perhaps would fly the Pacific ocean to Japan.

Of this, Post said:

"I have no plans for such a flight. No plans now."

HEROES' WIVES JOIN IN N. Y.'S NOISY CELEBRATION

HAROLD GATTY — MRS. GATTY — MRS. POST — WILEY POST

The record-breaking world girdlers Wiley Post and Harold Gatty and their wives photographed in their hotel today just before the official reception given them by the City of New York got under way. New York went wild in acclaiming the globe gallopers. This photo was sent to Boston by telephoto for International Newsreel.

Lindbergh, on Outside, Just Looking On

New York, July 2 (INS)—While a wild demonstration was in progress at Roosevelt Field during the arrival of the round-the-world fliers Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, an aviation figure, who had witnessed a similar scene four years ago, sat unnoticed on the sidelines.

He was Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who came with his wife to pay their respects to the new heroes of the air.

POST WILL HAVE FEAST WHEN HE GETS HOME

Wife Will Cook It for Him, and Maybe There Will Be a Special Pie

By JANE EADS
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, July 2 (AP)—Wiley Post is going to spend the next few days doffing his hat to the cheering crowds and eating the delicacies of the banquet tables, but there will be a little private feast when he's just Mr. Post again back in Oklahoma City. His wife will cook it.

"After all, there's nothing else I could do," said Mrs. Mae Post. "He deserves it."

"What will you cook for him? What does he like?"

"Everything," she answered.

She smiled then, secretly, as if recalling one of her special pies which didn't have to be returned to the pantry shelf.

SEEN LITTLE, HEARD LESS

A calm women with wide, brown eyes, Mrs. Post apparently belongs to that school who believe that "wives should be seen and little heard from."

"I said, 'Gee, hello,' or something like that, and then I caught his arm and kissed him," she told reporters.

Mrs. Post said she would never want to "settle down" and be a stay-at-home. Not while her husband is flying about to far parts of the world.

"I'll always go everywhere he goes. I'll follow him if I can't go along with him," she said.

MRS. GATTY AFTER A KISS

Mrs. Gatty, prevented by thunder storms from arriving by plane in time to welcome her globe-flying husband last night, reached New York by train from Pittsburgh this morning. She left Los Angeles by plane Tuesday.

Mrs. Gatty, mother of three children, whom she left with neighbors in Glendale, Cal., had no time to talk with reporters. She said she "must hurry and kiss Harold."

"I haven't slept much, you can imagine, while Harold and Mr. Post have been on the trip," she said. "When this reception business is over I'm going home and sleep about a month.

"Our children are 'air-minded,'" she said. "They are already talking about flying and I guess they'll fly when they're older. They don't quite realize what their father has done. They just know he's been away."

MAYOR ATTACKS POLICE GRAFT

To and what he charged is "the most prolific source of graft among Boston policemen," Mayor James M. Curley today arranged a conference on parking with the traffic board in his office tomorrow morning at 9:30.

"I will advocate enforcement of the rule allowing unlimited parking on one side of a street for 12 hours and on the other side of the same street during the next 12 hours," said the mayor. "That is the only fair way to meet the problem.

"The rule has never been enforced by the police, and it is about time they made a real effort to enforce it. This is the most prolific source of graft among the police.

"If the rule was enforced rigidly it would settle the parking problem definitely. It would stop petty graft among the police, some of whom are paid by owners of autos for permitting cars to remain parked in prohibited places."

At tomorrow's meeting an attempt will be made to do away with alleged favoritism on the exclusion of trucks from certain streets. The mayor says he believes all streets should be thrown open to trucks, as favoritism has crept in through the influence of persons living on certain streets.

Extension of the traffic light system to Edward Everett sq. and on Tremont st., between Massachusetts ave. and Broadway, will also be discussed. The meeting is expected to reopen the whole parking controversy between City Hall officials and the police.

GIRL SAVES HER SISTER IN RIVER

The presence of mind of Miss Louise Martini, 21, of 411 Broadway, Somerville, who ran into the Mystic river fully clothed, saved the life of her sister Olga, 19, at Somerville bathing beach today.

Olga is unable to swim and got beyond her depth, but her sister managed to reach her hand and drew her to safety.

Two unidentified men applied the prone method of resuscitation, and the girl was taken to Central Hospital, Somerville, where she was treated for immersion.

At the hospital she told Patrolmen William H. Donovan and William Burnett she stepped off a rock into a hole where the water was over her head.

Louise had driven Olga to the beach and was standing nearby when she heard Olga's screams.

Lady Inverclyde to Risk Bigamy Charge

Hollywood, Cal., July 2 (AP)—Lady June Inverclyde, ex-wife of the English stage, today proclaimed her intention of becoming the bride of Lothar Mendes, motion picture director, even at the risk of being classed as a bigamist.

The actress, who has established residence at Reno preparatory to filing suit for divorce charging extreme cruelty, said here last night the Nevada decree would not be recognized in England on those grounds. Unless Lord Inverclyde obtained an English divorce, she said, she would be liable to prosecution for bigamy if she married Mendes after the Reno divorce and then returned to England.

Ski Champion in Dartmouth Romance

Paris, July 2—A United States romance at Dartmouth College developed into a honeymoon today for John Carleton, ski champion and New Hampshire lawyer, and Miss Alesia Skinner, daughter of Prof. Skinner of Dartmouth.

The couple were married yesterday in the American Cathedral of Holy Trinity with a large number of Smith College graduates present. The latter were classmates of the bride, who graduated last year.

BANDIT SLAIN IN GUN FIGHT

other, fell dead with a bullet through the back of his skull.

Both Beck and Colabelli denied firing the fatal shot and protested that they were unarmed. Beck was under the impression that a man standing in the doorway as the second bandit fled pulled a gun and shot him.

TWO GUNS FOUND

Two guns were found, that in the hand of the slain robber, a .38 calibre revolver, and a .32 calibre revolver lying at the entrance of the house. One shot had been fired from each, the fatal shot apparently from the .32 calibre weapon, discarded by the man who used it.

Beck and Colabelli were taken to the Hemenway Police Station. Neither was seriously hurt.

The dead robber was between 23 and 30 years old, five feet five inches tall, 150 pounds. He wore threadbare clothing, a dark cap and needed a shave. The initial "S" appeared on his belt buckle.

The bandit who escaped was younger and slighter. Both wore dark complexion.

SEEN PEERING IN WINDOW

According to the story told by Beck and Colabelli to the police, they had been under observation by the robber pair for some time.

Beck, making the rounds to collect rents, called first at 452 Hanover st., where Colabelli lives. He and the janitor saw the two men, who later held them up on a fire escape there peering in a window.

The janitor inquired what they were doing and they answered, "Waiting for a friend," jumped from the fire escape and disappeared.

It was about an hour later that the four met on the stairway landing in the Holden ct. house, one of several properties formerly under control of Guy L. Vaughan, missing bank receiver.

POLICE RESERVES SENT.

The shooting aroused the neighborhood in the vicinity of Commercial wharf. Capt. John J. Rooney sent reserves into the district in the belief that the sensational months armistice in the gang war had ended.

Police at first believed Beck had slain the robber after Colabelli had been slugged unconscious, but when they questioned him at the hospital he denied he had any weapon. Neither he nor the janitor is licensed in Boston to carry a revolver.

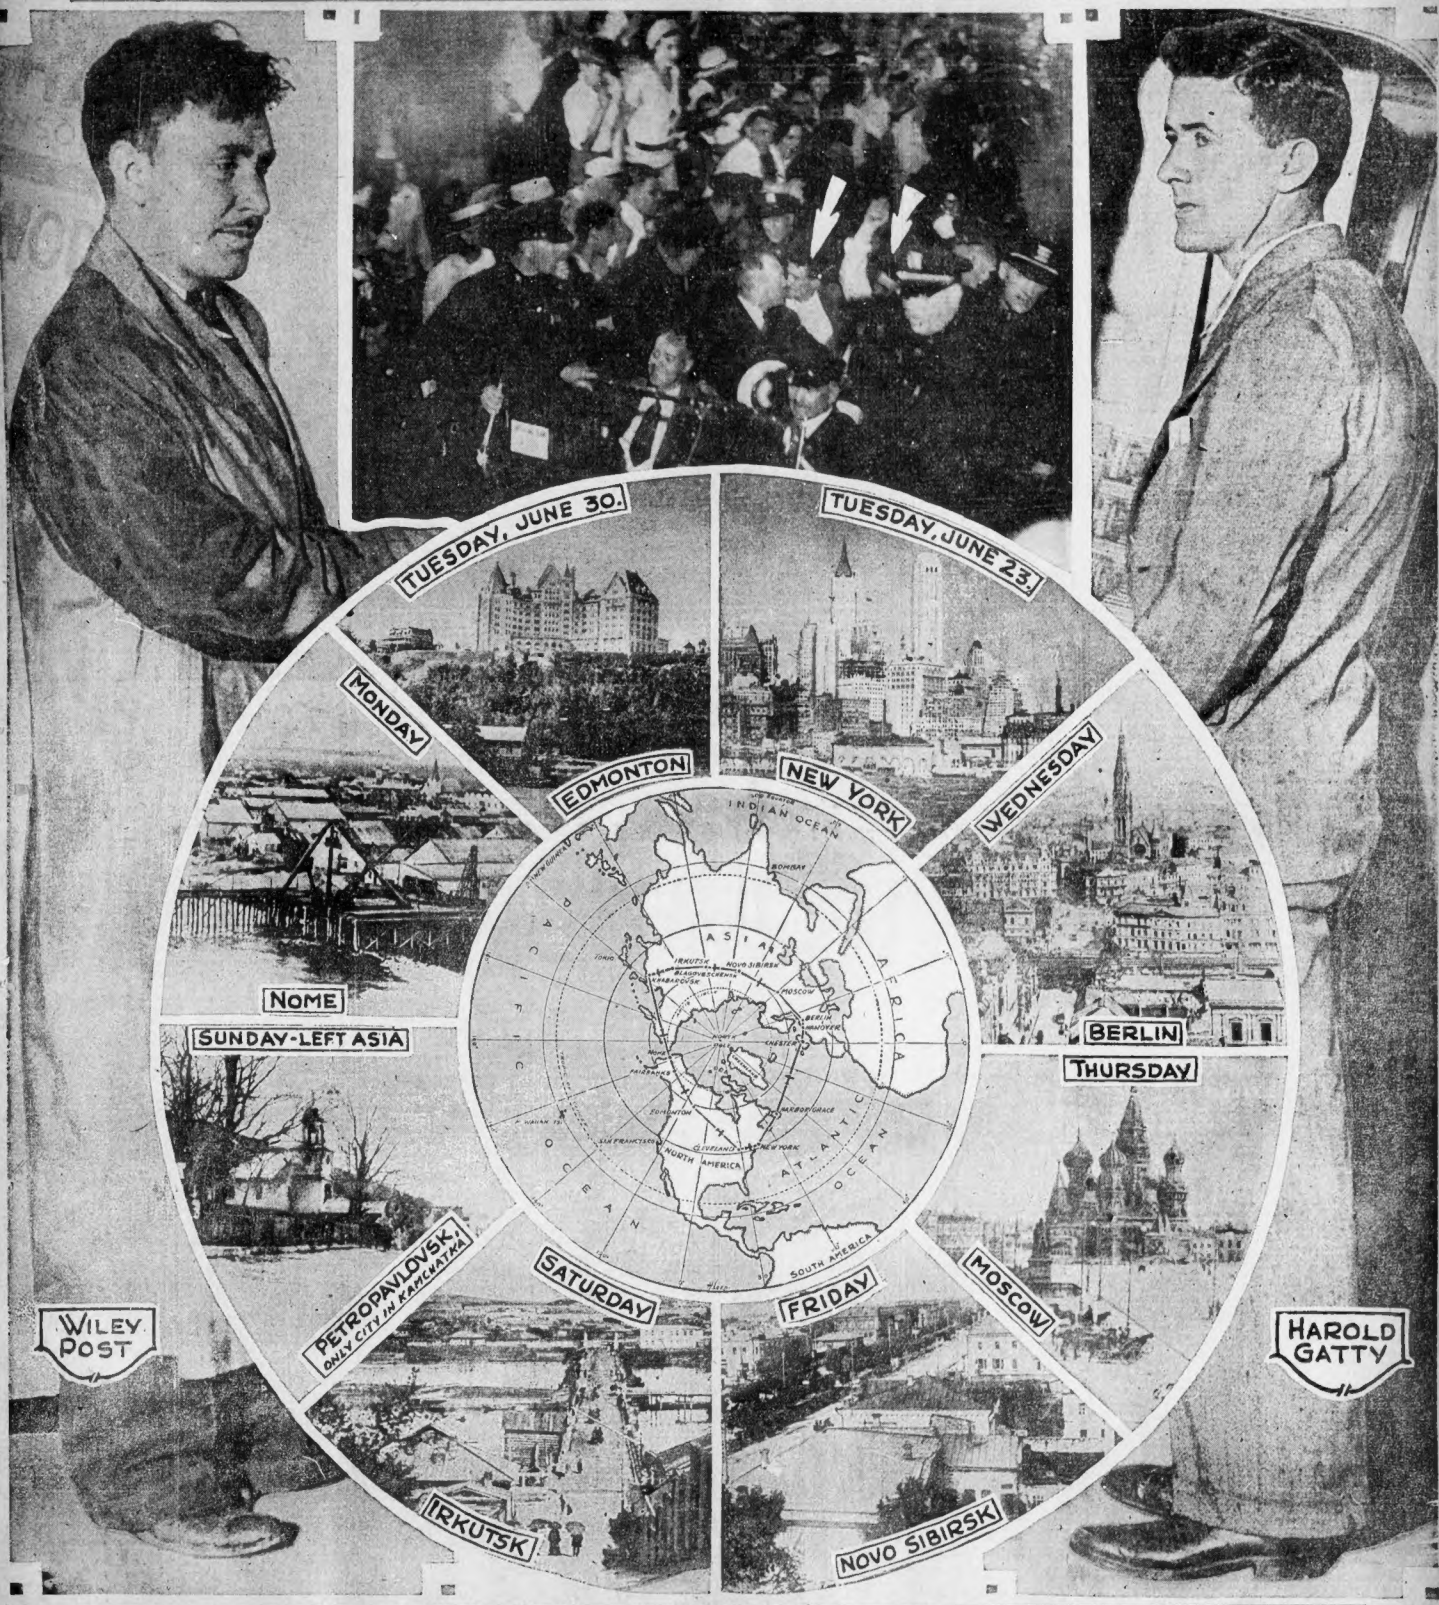
SPEED, COURAGE, SKILL, ENDURANCE 'SHRINK' MOTHER EARTH



Photos by Boston Evening American Staff Photographers and International Newsreel

Roaring home after circling the world on a flight that has no parallel in history except the journey by Magellan's ship around the globe, Wiley Post and Harold Gatty triumphantly arrived in New York last night. Tremendous endurance, courage and skill, coupled with the driving speed of their gallant plane, has carried them across oceans, mountains and plains—all the way around the world. Map shows their route. The top picture shows Wiley and Post, denoted by arrows, as they landed last night in the midst of cheering thousands, who welcomed them back to their starting point at Roosevelt Field after their Globe-girdling journey. New York's cheering thousands paid tribute to the fliers at exercises today.

LIFE STORY OF WILEY POST THRILLING

It is easy to follow the trail to Wiley Post, but difficult to unravel the ingredients which make up his personality. Stocky, brown-eyed, brown-haired and taciturn, Post has a heritage of several generations of southwestern pioneers as well as an Indian strain in his blood.

* * *

Farming never interested him much. His mother, Mrs. W. F. Post, recalls that even when he was a small, bare-footed, freckle-faced youngster, he had an inordinate desire to tinker with things. He read adventure stories, showed a preference for mechanical toys, and only once developed sufficient enthusiasm for farming to indicate he could do it if he would. This was when his father gave him a small cotton patch. Wiley took the utmost pains in the development of his crop and when he had pocketed the profits, he found he had enough to set out for a school to train automobile mechanics in Kansas City, Mo.

The Wright brothers' experiments during the first period of aviation development probably were responsible for Wiley's ambition to fly. He heard the story of their experiments, and when he should have been hoeing in his father's fields he was more likely to be whittling out an "airplane" model. His last teacher, in a rural school at Burns, Okla., was Hugh Austin, now of Oklahoma City. Austin recalls that once when he prevailed upon Wiley to improve his work in grammar, the boy remarked he wasn't much interested in that study as he wanted to be an aviator—an unusual ambition at that time.

* * *

Wiley was born, November 22, 1898, in Van Zandt County, Texas, on an isolated farm in the region where his parents were reared. While Wiley and Gatty were demonstrating a picture of "two young men in a hurry" around the world, Wiley's great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Post, both 90 years old, were still back in Van Zandt County, reading of his achievements.

"Wiley never took much interest in school work," his mother says. "He was a good boy, but full of pranks. He always loved to read good stories. His father wouldn't let him read trash. He liked adventure stories best."

The record shows Wiley was not a good student in grammar school. He quit before he was 15 years old, but a few months after that he had acquired the cotton patch from his father and was proving to the instructors in the mechanical school at Kansas City that he could be a good student—if he was interested in the subject.

* * *

There are countless stories about Wiley Post's life on his parents' farm in Texas and Oklahoma, but in view of the fame he has just gained in aviation few have much point or bearing on his career. It was after he had won his diploma from the automobile mechanics' school in Kansas City that Wiley began to devote his time to engines and his thoughts to flying. He was the third youngest of six boys and one girl in the Post family and he was not hampered in his pursuits. His parents, who live two miles north of Maysville, Okla., where they raise truck and feed crops, believe in the doctrine of good sense, and as long as their children didn't get into trouble they allowed them a fairly free rein. Later Wiley's father did object to his parachute jumping and big his 'chute one day, but Wiley's friends say the tables were turned next time when Wiley carried the bulky 'chute down to the bank and deposited it so his father wouldn't find it.

* * *

Wiley left the Kansas City automobile school and became a garage mechanic, an oil field worker, and a machine shop laborer before he realized his ambition to fly. But once he got his chance he went for air travel with a vengeance and when he received his transport license March 3, 1931, he estimated he had more than 3100 hours flying time.

Tomorrow: A garage mechanic turns wing-walker and parachute jumper, graduating into a barnstorming pilot.

Leaders in Aviation Laud Post and Gatty

New York, July 2 (INS)—Aviation leaders today praised the round-the-world flight of Wiley Post and Harold Gatty. Their trip was greeted as one of the outstanding achievements in aviation. The comment included the following:

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh: "It was a wonderful job. You have to hand it to them. The flight speaks for itself.

Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of Naval Bureau of Aeronautics: The achievement of Gatty and Post cannot but assure the public of the reliability of aircraft.

F. Trubee Davison, assistant Secretary of War (from a message to Gatty and Post): Because of you the world is smaller than ever before. The army air corps admires and honors you.

Amelia Earhart: The world flight of Post and Gatty shows what may be expected to become the commonplace in a few years. It is an excellent demonstration of skill and flying combined with fine equipment.

Charles L. Lawrence, president of Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce: This most extraordinary flight combines remarkable piloting and navigation, extraordinary energy and physical courage.

grand jury for the alleged assault with intent to kill.

Litigation with Miss Georgiana Crenner, foster sister of her late father, Irving Perry Dodge, and estrangement from her husband, George Ransom Taylor, prompted Mrs. Taylor's attempt at suicide, according to police.

Her suit for $500,000 against Miss Crenner, who is in charge of the disputed hospital property left by the plaintiff's father, has been heard before Henry P. Fielding, as master, for some days.

ATTY. VIOLA'S STORY

Atty. Viola said today:

"Gough is a strong man, graduate of a Southern college where he won a degree and he served with the Marines in the World War. He came out of the service shattered in health but set to work building up his health and strength until he became a perfect physical specimen. He is 38 years old.

"He was showing at Revere while awaiting more profitable contracts. One day Mrs. Taylor dropped in and was so carried away with his act that she solicited an introduction and promised to help him financially.

"Mrs. Taylor told Gough the fortune left by her father was involved in litigation, but that as soon as it was straightened out she would help put across his act. She invited him to call at her Commonwealth ave. apartment.

"In May Gough was a dinner guest there. Mrs. Taylor said she would like to attend a night club on Lenox st. in the South End. They danced there and then she told Gough she wanted to go to a restaurant on Columbus ave.

"Gough said they had scarcely become seated when a big Negro approached and attacked him with a razor. Although hemmed in by others whose attitude was menacing Gough managed to escape."

'Dutch Schultz' Held; Gun-Toting Charged

New York, July 2 (AP)—Arthur Flengenheimer, deposed Bronx beer baron, better known as "Dutch Schultz," and one of his lieutenants, Martin Krompier, 29, were arrested on a charge of violating the Sullivan law last night.

Detectives said they found an automatic pistol in Krompier's automobile. Schultz was out in $45,000 bail following arrest June 18 for felonious assault.

BRITAIN READY TO CALL A WAR DEBT PARLEY

London, July 2 (AP)—The British government today officially expressed its willingness to hold a meeting of representatives of the powers chiefly concerned in the Hoover war debt plan if the Franco-American negotiations in Paris prove unsuccessful.

The government's statement read: "His Majesty's government earnestly hopes that the discussion now taking place in Paris will be successful.

"Should no early solution be found, they have expressed their willingness—in order that agreement may be reached with minimum delay—to hold a meeting of representatives of the countries chiefly concerned at an early date."

French Cabinet Tries to Agree With Hoover

Paris, July 2 (AP)—The French cabinet conferred all morning at the Elysee Palace under the guidance of President Doumer, seeking a formula for a war debt holiday that would satisfy both President Hoover and the French Parliament.

It was understood the principal subject considered was the guarantee which, under the Young plan, France would be required to pay into the Bank for International Settlements if Germany suspended her unconditional reparations payments.

As the investigations were expected to take all day and as the American delegates, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Ambassador Edge, are busy communicating with Washington, today's Franco-American meeting was set for 9:30 P. M., (4:30 P. M., E. S. T.).

After the cabinet session the opinion arose that the negotiations would require a longer time than anticipated, for if compromises are achieved they will entail technical considerations connected with the operation of the Young Plan.

Germany Near Collapse When Hoover Made Offer

Berlin, July 2 (AP)—How near Germany was to financial collapse when President Hoover made his moratorium offer was revealed today by reports issued periodically by such influential institutions as the Kredit Gesellschaft and Deutsche Bank and Disconto Gesellschaft.

The reports show that in the last three months, especially in June, a psychological factor of fear dominated the markets. The Reichsbank lost 1,250,000,000 gold marks in the first three weeks of June, it was revealed, or one third of the aggregate foreign credits accumulated in five years of patient building-up of confidence in German credit.

Refusal May Cost France $100,000,000

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE

Washington, July 2 (US)—President Hoover in his new note to France pointed out that unless the French agree to the plan for a one-year suspension of all war debt payments they stand to lose $100,000,000.

France will sustain this loss because, with the plan scrapped, Germany will "unquestionably postpone all her conditional reparation payments," the note declared.

The President revealed, in outlining the present debt situation, that the United States and France are in accord in two "all important points." These, he said, are:

"First, that France will forego the retention of any payments from Germany for the period of one year, and

"Second, that the principle of continuity of payment of unconditional annuities is recognized while complete relief to Germany is afforded."

Post and Gatty Will Tell Hoover of Their Trip Around World

Washington, July 2 (AP)—The magic of a dizzying dash around the world opened White House doors to two quiet airmen who six weeks ago passed nearly unnoticed in Washington.

President Hoover, in dispatching congratulations to Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, included an invitation to a luncheon. The fliers' representatives accepted for Monday.

The chief executive, a globe trotter himself, followed the flight with interest. He has received other of aviation's daring ambassadors before to talk not so much of flying as of the places they have been.

Washington plans a different sort of notice for the world racers than was accorded them here in May when they were just another of a large group making plans.

Congratulations at the completion of the globe flight went out from federal aviation officialdom and the Washington Board of Trade made plans for a welcoming banquet when the fliers accept President Hoover's invitation.

DI FALCO CASE NEARS END

Counter charges of perjured testimony today featured closing arguments in the trial of Mrs. Angelina Di Falco of Dedham in the jury-waived session before Judge Edward P. Hanify.

Mrs. Di Falco is charged with the larceny of approximately $1500 from Mrs. Giovanina Voce of the West End, by representing she could obtain the release from State Prison of Mrs. Voce's brother.

Atty. John C. Johnston for Mrs. Di Falco said the government's case was "fantastic and preposterous." He said at the time government witnesses testified Mrs. Di Falco got the money she was under the care of a doctor and a nurse in her home.

He said there was no doubt in his mind that Charles M. Keene, former president of the Boston City Council, had told Mrs. Di Falco that if Mrs. Voce's claim was settled he would see Judge Elijah Adlow about stopping criminal proceedings.

Asst. Dist.-Atty. Frederick T. Doyle began his arguments with the statement that Mrs. Di Falco's story was "reeking with falsehood."

HANGS BY BELT 6 STORIES UP

Office workers in the Board of Trade building in State st. saved Willard G. Wadleigh, 30, a window cleaner, from being dashed to the sidewalk as he hung suspended by a safety belt from a window on the sixth floor.

Wadleigh had lost his footing and his feet dangled above a fifth floor window as he struggled to regain the ledge. George Randall, employed in the office of the American Railway Association on the fifth floor, saw his predicament and succeeded in pulling him halfway through the window while employes on the upper floor released the belt, allowing Wadleigh to slide to safety.

Hundreds of persons lined the street below to watch the rescue.

Freight Car Bombed in Rome, Two Killed

Rome, July 2 (AP)—A bomb exploded in a freight train today at Portonaccio, a suburban freight yard, killing two men and injuring one, as freight workers opened a car for a customs inspection.

It was the fifth in a series of terroristic demonstrations in recent weeks.

SECOND SOARIS CASE FILED

Dist.-Atty. Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex today filed a second murder indictment pending against Joaquin P. Soaris, saved from death in the electric chair by a commutation of sentence from Gov Ely yesterday.

Bishop filed the indictment, he said, to register his approval of the Governor's act of clemency.

"It is well known that I am a firm believer in capital punishment," the district attorney said, "but the Governor's action in this case meets with my entire approval."

Soaris, sentenced to die for the slaying of Angelina Rodesiques, also was convicted of the murder of Matilda Silva.

RICH DROWNING VICTIM RESTS BY FIRST SPOUSE

By BERT FORD

Mrs. Adelaide Pierce Davis, divorcee, victim of an accidental drowning in Lake Suntaug, West Peabody, Tuesday midnight, will be buried beside the man who bequeathed her millions.

She will be buried beside her first husband, John B. Pierce, in Cedar Grove C[e]metery, Dorchester, tomorrow noon, according to announcement made today by her sister, Mrs. ...uth Frechette of Swampscott.

Pierce, vice-president of the American Radiator Co., married her when he was 70 and willed her more than $4,000,000.

The finding of "death by accidental drowning" appears on the burial permit issued by Dr. Samuel C. Tucker, medical examiner.

Dr. Tucker's verdict has been accepted by Chief of Police Edward F. Pierce of Peabody and State Detective William Murray, representing Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg, of Essex County.

'COMPANION QUESTIONED

Richard H. Bennett, New York engineer and accountant who had acted as Mrs. Davis' financial adviser since December and who was her companion in the ill-fated row boat, was subjected to a long examination by Detective Murray, Chief Pierce and Inspector James Murphy at the Davis mansion late yesterday, in the presence of a stenographer. The interview was attended by Atty. Charles C. Buckman, of Boston, counsel for Mrs. Davis.

At the close of the interview the officials reported that Bennett had done everything in his power to save Mrs. Davis and was exhausted when rescued by James Armstrong, the caretaker of the estate, and the latter's son, Roger.

WIFE IN SECLUSION

Bennett's wife, who came from New York after she received word of the drowning, was in seclusion at the Davis estate today.

Friends and relatives of Mrs. Davis were wondering today if her second husband, Howard Clark Davis, Boston real estate broker and yachtsman, whom she divorced in Miami, Fla., last February, on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment, would attend her funeral tomorrow afternoon from Lynnfield Acres, her beautiful estate on the shore of the lake in which she perished.

It was learned today that Mrs. Davis died longing for a reconciliation with the former Dartmouth athlete. Intimates said Mrs. Davis loved him despite the marital rift and the divorce, which did not become absolute until April 14.

'MORAL FORCES' AIDING DRYS

University, Va., July 2 (AP)—Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, the director of prohibition, addressing the Institute of Public Affairs today, emphasized the importance of moral forces in law enforcement and the need for loyal, efficient investigators in gathering evidence.

Recognizing, he said, that fear of punishment is an important factor in law observance, he declared his belief that "the moral forces are by far the more important and powerful." There are no limits, he said, to what may be done by education.

Standards for investigators in the prohibition department have been raised, he pointed out, defining as the ideal "a courageous, well-behaved, loyal, honest and intelligent investigator, who regards his work as a profession, and who is as zealous to protect the innocent as to bring the guilty to justice."

TANKER TAKES GAS TO ALBANY

New York, July 2 (AP)—Shipment of gasoline by tanker to Albany has been inaugurated by the Standard Oil Co. of New York, the Levant Arrow, a carrier of 10,000 gross tons and a carrying capacity of 3,030,000 gallons of gasoline, having completed what was said to be the first large tanker shipment of the kind.

Disclosure of the new gasoline transportation method to distributing bases at Albany and, through transshipment by barges along the barge canal, followed announcement of price cuts made yesterday. The reductions were interpreted as due in part to meet competition as in part to saving effected by cheaper transportation.

Pulpwood Admitted

Washington, July 2—In the absence of evidence that it was produced by convict labor, a cargo of Russian pulpwood today was ordered admitted.

American Hootch Is Putting the Scots Out of Business

London, July 2 (INS)—American stills are producing so much "hootch" that most of the Scotch whiskey distilleries are closing down.

Twenty out of forty distilleries in the Speyside area have decided to close.

High domestic taxation is one cause, but the main cause is the big American domestic production.

CHINA BLOCKS EXPLORATION

Peiping, China, July 2 (AP)—The Haardt Asiatic expedition, collaborating with the National Geographic Society in a 13,000-mile trek over the legendary trail of Marco Polo, has been forbidden by the Nationalist government to enter Chinese Turkestan.

The "high-handed conduct" of Lieut.-Comdr. Victor Polat, leader of the Chinese unit, is said to be the reason.

SLAIN PASTOR'S WIDOW NAMES SAUNDERS IN 'CHOIR' MYSTERY

"THE MURDER OF THE CHOIR SINGER"
BY ANTHONY ABBOT

WE ALL leaned forward with the deepest interest.

"You mean," whispered Dougherty, "that you know who killed your husband?"

Mrs. Beazeley slowly shook her head.

"That is not what Mr. Colt asked me. He wanted to know whether I knew anyone who hated my husband and desired his death, and I said that I did."

"Who is that person, Mrs. Beazeley?"

For only a second she hesitated. Then, in a low, clear voice, she named:

"Willie Saunders."

"The husband——"

"Of the woman found beside Doctor Beazeley's body. Yes, Willie Saunders gets drunk and is violent. My husband was contemplating a court order to remove the daughter from Saunder's authority. And on account of that Willie Saunders made wild threats against him?"

"Who heard them?"

"The sexton of our church. And several persons in the organization. The sexton told me about them and he can give you the names."

For a little pause, Colt remained somber and thoughtful. Finally he looked at Fegley.

"Has Saunders been found?"

DEEPLY OBLIGED

"Yes—his daughter, too. They went over to the Morgue and now they're on their way over here."

Colt turned his back to the window.

"I am deeply obliged, Mrs. Beazeley. There is but one more matter. To find the murderer of your husband, the police must probe very deeply into his personal affairs. This means a scrutiny of all his private papers, —in fact, I consider a search of your house of first consequence."

"You want to search our home?" she asked blankly.

"At once," said Thatcher Colt. "Inspector Fegley will go with you, with two of his men."

Mrs. Beazeley stood up and looked at Colt frigidly.

"I am without legal advice," she said slowly. "Am I forced to submit to this—indignity?"

"No," answered Colt, also rising.

"Then I certainly refuse."

"But in that case," inserted Dougherty, plainly, "we shall be regretfully forced to detain you here for further questioning, until morning, when we shall obtain a search warrant from the court."

She understood instantly, fully. With a resigned air she lifted her hands in a slight gesture of capitulation.

"When may I speak with my brothers?"

"I am sorry," said Colt, "but under the circumstances I request that you do not."

A long look passed between the widow and the Police Commissioner. Then, with a nod of her head, she signified her acquiescence, and turned toward Assistant Chief Inspector Fegley. In one brief glance she seemed to appraise him. The Inspector looked as compassionate as possible; he is a stern-visaged man, with eyes that seem to inquire: "What crime have you just committed?" of everyone he surveys. In some embarrassment, he promised:

"I will make the search as simple as possible, ma'am."

"Good night, Mrs. Beazeley," said Thatcher Colt. "I shall be at your house sometime during the morning. Undoubtedly, I shall want to talk with you. Will you kindly hold yourself in readiness —I will try to trouble you as little as possible."

FORCED TO LOOK.

Undeniably the procedure adopted with Mrs. Beazeley that night seemed unnatural to the point of cruelty. Assuming her own story to be true, she had just learned of her husband's murder. She deserved all privacy for her grief and suffering. Yet she was forced to look at the body of her husband, lying by the side of the younger, prettier woman, who was his partner in death. Then she had been questioned by the police, and now she was taken down a back staircase, without the opportunity to exchange a word with her brothers.

A bereaved and lonely woman, she was taken home by strangers.

When Mrs. Beazeley had left the room with Fegley, Thatcher Colt said:

"Now that we have the widow's fingerprints suppose we have a look at the brother-in-law? Tony, let's have a look at Mr. Paddington Curtainwood."

As I started for the door, Colt instructed Lengel to make sure of the sexton at the first opportunity, and to follow up the persons he would name in order to confirm the story of threats uttered against the minister's wife by Willie Saunders.

Presently I returned, urging before me the shrinking pitiful figure of Paddy Curtainwood. I had not yet told the brothers that Mrs. Beazeley had been sent home. Blinkingly, Paddy stood in the center of the library and looked for his sister.

"What have you done with Elizabeth?" he asked, a whimper in his voice.

I want to make it clear that those detectives, led by my chief, were kind to the pitch of tenderness with this unfortunate man. The reports of brutal treatment were utterly untrue, and were circulated by the family attorney to create public sympathy —a frequent, if not altogether ethical piece of expediency.

OVERGROWN CHILD

There was no intimidation of Paddy Curtainwood. We looked upon him as an overgrown child, with his blinking eyes and unhealthy yellow color; we treated him as a good-natured but frightened and not over-bright boy of 12. He told us very little, and helped us none at all.

"I went to bed at 10 o'clock. My sister woke me up to sit with her while she sewed. I don't know what it was she sewed. It was something for the heathen on India's coral strand."

Such was the substance of his testimony. He, too, denied that anyone had come to the rectory at eleven-thirty. Beyond that, he could say nothing except that he did not know. And after each reiteration of his ignorance, he would demand:

"What have you done with Elizabeth?"

After fifteen minutes of this, we sent him home, under the escort of an officer. Later, Colt remarked of him that while he had a child's mind he was shrewd—certainly he was neither a zany nor a buffoon. He made no request to see Gerald; in fact, he seemed timid of his elder brother, but he was eager to get back to Mrs. Beazley.

"This young man tells me you have sent my sister home with only policemen," he broke forth. "That was a contemptible trick."

Colt stared at him with a wintry gleam in his eyes.

"Sit down," he invited the witness crisply. "I take it, Mr. Curtainwood, you are just as anxious as we are to find the person who killed Dr. Beazley."

"I am more interested in caring for the living than avenging the dead," returned Gerald promptly, and sat stiffly in the chair, recently vacated by his sister.

"Well, we won't quarrel over that," temporized Colt. "But I want to ask you, man to man, if you were not aware of an affair between Beazeley and Evelyn Saunders?"

"Sheer poppy-cock. Beazeley was not only a clergyman—he was a gentleman. She was the wife of a night watchman."

Colt nodded curtly, then switched suddenly into a different line of questions.

"Will you do us the kindness, Mr. Curtainwood, to detail us your own actions this evening?"

"Tonight."

"Ah, yes. Tonight. Well, that won't be difficult. Let me see. I dined at home. With my wife, my daughter Margaret, her fiance, David Tumble, and my young son."

"What time was dinner?"

"Our dinner is served invariably at 6:30. It gives servants a decent bite out of an evening."

"And dinner was over tonight by 7:30?" computed my chief.

"No doubt."

"Have you any recollection as to what topics were discussed during the meal?"

"Well, we talked about the World Court, in which I am very interested. Also about the uncertainty of the stock market. And we discussed young Tumble's chances to looking for an opening in St. Louis, where he seems anxious to settle. My son talked about baseball. My wife talked about the church work, and also spoke f a bargain sale.

"And then?"

"And then I sat around the house, read for a while, listened to the radio for quite a while—"

WHERE NEW ENGLAND BUYS ITS FOODS

WOMEN WATCH WHERE THEIR DOLLARS GO

Washington, July 2 (AP)—The large round dollar today was being set up for study by 5,000 women's clubs with a view to making it loom larger and go farther around.

"The depression has made its challenge to women everywhere," explained Mrs. John L. Sippel, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. "Never have I seen women working in closer harmony on a common problem—it is reminiscent of wartime."

The federation purpose in its new economic adjustment program, she said, was to give definite direction to this spontaneous impulse.

"Our key thought will be, 'Follow your dollar back,'" she said. "Find out where every penny goes. Answer these questions: Did you pay more because of change of mind? Are you sure what you got was what you wanted? Do you really want it now or could the purchase have well waited? Are you charged more on food things because of an English label on marmalade or a French label on sauces when a United States product might have equal worth?"

The program will be carried through the country by a special committee. Mrs. Robert E. Gadd, of Hartford, Conn., is a member.

FINN DRY LAW TO BE MODIFIED

Helsingfors, July 2 (INS)—Finland, hailed as the "driest country in the world," by all foes of alcohol, is making preparations for a modification of its dry laws enacted in 1917.

The "Bjoerkenheim Committee," appointed by the Finnish government and in some way comparable with the American Wickersham Commission, has studied the complicated problems brought up by prohibition and will shortly submit a report with definite proposals to repeal part of the alcohol legislation.

The committee is reported to have found that enforcement of the dry laws despite all efforts by the government has proved a failure.

The committee will propose to exempt beer and light wine, up to 12 per cent alcoholic content, from prohibition. Efforts to get the Finns away from hard liquor are to be redoubled, however.

The anti-prohibition movement is strongly backed by various women's organizations. The Socialist party and the majority of the 5000 students of the University of Helsingfors are "bone dry."

Kuerten, German "Ripper," Executed

Cologne, Germany, July (INS)—Peter Kuerten, notorious "Duesseldorf "Ripper" murder, died on the guillotine in the jail yard of the Cologne prison today.

About a score of murders, many of them children, were charged against Kuerten. He confessed to most of them.

Flivver of the Air to Cost Only $225

Berlin, July 2 (INS)—"An airplane for everybody—at $225!"

This is the slogan of the "Sturmvogel," a "league of amateur fliers," which has just completed its first pigmy plane and is offering to produce and sell more at an amazingly cheap price.

MOTHER'S PLEA FOR CHILDREN HIT IN COURT

Mrs. Charlotte Carpenter, Beacon Hill matron, heard herself described in court today as a woman who wanted to live her life in her own way—as a woman "devoted to hotel life, to her bootlegger and to her automobile."

Mrs. Carpenter's former daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mae Carpenter, drew the verbal picture of the matron in her suit to regain custody of her four children, now being cared for by her one-time mother-in-law.

COUNSEL IN WRANGLE

According to the younger Mrs. Carpenter, the elder woman told her:

"I don't want your children. I'd like to be able to have my hotel me- bootlegger and my automobile."

Testimony in the case was interrupted at this juncture by a wrangle between opposing counsel over the admission of this description of the older woman to the court record.

Patrick J. Delaney, counsel for Mrs. Mae Carpenter, emerged victorious. The description was allowed to stand.

"Did this mysterious admirer of yours—C. B. O.—arrange to have a stranger take you home from a party at the Statler hotel in April?" the attractive divorcee was asked.

She answered: "I can always take care of Mrs. Mae Carpenter. I refuse to answer your question. Your insinuations disgust me."

She admitted, finally, that a stranger had taken her home.

The "C. B. O." referred to is said to be an American League official.

NEW ADMIRER MENTIONED

Another alleged admirer was drawn into the proceedings when Atty. Edward W. Kenney showed her a slip of paper bearing the name of a man, with the initials "P. B."

"Did you ever send this man a series of notes and telegrams in New York?" Kenney asked.

After a brief hesitation, Mrs. Carpenter replied: "I don't think so."

STANDISH RAPS YOUNGMAN AS 'ABSENTEE'

An attack on Lieut.-Gov. William S. Youngman was made today in a letter to Chairman Amos L. Taylor of the Republican state committee from Rep. Lemuel W. Standish of Stoneham, sometimes referred to as former Gov. Fuller's spokesman.

"It's high time the Republicans in Massachusetts took steps to end the popular fiction that Youngman is leader of their party," the letter said.

"There is no better time for pointing this out for only yesterday the lieutenant-governor popped off six months of indifference by absenting himself at a time when the executive council was passing on one of the most important appointments of the year.

"I refer to the action taken on the nomination of Morgan T. Ryan, registrar of motor vehicles.

"He has done nothing since Gov. Ely took office to advance the interests of the Republican party."

Standish also charged lack of leadership, and warned that Youngman should not be named governor from his work thus far.

MOTHER OF FIVE FLEES COURT

The story of a mother's abandonment of her five small children rather than face a number of liquor charges, was told to Judge Edward L. Logan in South Boston court today.

The woman, Mrs. Annie Joyce, of Gold st., defaulted when her case was called yesterday.

The children were turned over to the S. P. C. C. by Judge Logan.

Mrs. Joyce was arrested in a raid Saturday night.

At her house yesterday police found a man describing himself as Dr. Thomas Coan, a dentist. He was arrested for drunkenness and was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction.

DUKE SLAPPED BY U. S. ATTACHE

London, July 2—A story that an American commercial attache boxed the ears of a Hungarian duke over an insult, but refused to settle the argument on the field of honor, was related by the Daily Express today.

William A. Hodgman, attached to the Budapest legation, recently was entertaining guests in the restaurant of the polo club there, dispatches said, when Duke Heinrich Erwin of Mecklenburg-Schwerin offended Mrs. Hodgman by a remark while dancing with her.

Hodgman was said to have retaliated with a stinging slap to the duke's head. The duke thereupon challenged him to a duel, but Hodgman declined. He left shortly afterward for America on leave of absence, and the duke also disappeared.

Hodgman, 47, is a native of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and a graduate of the United States Naval Academy.

The duke visited America before the war and in 1911 married the Countess de Gasquet-James, formerly Miss Elizabeth T. Pratt of Prattville, N. Y.

142 DRIVERS IN POLICE NET

One hundred and forty-two autoists, caught in a drive conducted by Cambridge police on the Northern artery, appeared in East Cambridge District Court today charged with violations of the automobile laws.

The majority of the motorists, of whom eight were women, were charged with failing to slow down at intersecting streets.

Eighteen others who were summoned failed to appear and default warrants were issued.

Most of those who appeared pleaded guilty or nolo and their cases were filed on payment of $5 costs.

Miss Hazel M. Sawyer of Commonwealth ave., who was fined $5 in addition to the costs, appealed and was held in $25 for Superior court.

Atty. Louis Bean, Jr., of Ipswich, fined $5 for refusing to answer the questions of a policeman, also appealed.

Gas Meter Service Charge Is Upheld

Three petitions for abolition of the 50-cent monthly service charge on gas meters were refused today by the State Department of Public Utilities.

The commissioners ruled that the expense of maintenance and the cost of billing and collecting authorized the charge.

The petitions were filed by a group of residents in Boston, another in Charlestown and the third by Mayor John J. Murphy of Somerville. All contended the charge was illegal.

Fall to Know Jail Verdict Next Week

Washington, July 2 (AP)—Albert B. Fall will probably be informed early next week whether he must come to Washington from El Paso to begin his prison sentence.

The report of his examination by army physicians is in the hands of the district attorney's office here, but no action is expected until Aides Pomarene, special prosecutor in the case, comes here from Cleveland. Pomerene plans to arrive in Washington next Monday or Tuesday.

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

What effect have harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos upon the throat? A famous authority, retained by us to study throat irritation, says:

"The tissues above and below the vocal chords and the vocal chords themselves may become acutely or chronically congested as a result of the inhalation of irritating fumes, in the case of chemists for example."

LUCKY STRIKE'S exclusive "TOASTING" Process, which includes the use of modern Ultra Violet Rays, expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. So "Consider your Adam's Apple"—that is your larynx—your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants. Be careful in your choice of cigarettes. Reach for a LUCKY instead.

'CLIFF'S' 2ND LESSON

For today's lesson in the Boston Evening Art Course, Cliff Sterrett continues his pantomime study, showing how to achieve body action as well as facial expression in your drawings.

Body action works hand in hand with facial expression to tell a story. Today Cliff Sterrett, who tells his stories in the universal language—pantomime—shows the Boston Evening American drawing class what to do with other people's hands and feet in any kind of company.

By CLIFF STERRETT

Yesterday we learned how to get effective facial expressions. Today I am going to try to tell you how to draw the body action to go with them. People show what they're thinking with their hands and feet much more than they do with their faces, you know.

That's particularly true of my favorite family, the Perkinses. They all have talking hands, which is lucky for me, as it makes it that much easier for me to show you what they're thinking about.

Look at Pa in the first picture I have drawn for you today. You see what I've done. I've started with one of the facial expressions we learned to draw yesterday. This particular one, if you remember, indicates that the sun is shining. Pa has just had a good breakfast, and has just learned that he has money in the bank.

NO SLOUCHING!

Now at such time as this we don't want Pa to be slouching around with sagging shoulders and dragging chin, because no one walks that way when he's feeling as Pa's face shows him to be feeling. No, indeed, on such a day a man walks with a jaunty swagger, a swing of his step. So we'll begin by drawing Pa that way.

First let's draw a skeleton. The skeleton is a good deal like the Daffydils that Charley Dunn showed you how to draw, except that it has a pair of shoulders and a pair of feet. Circles for hands, so far.

Now we fill in a body with a few simple lines. That ought not to be hard with the skeleton to guide you. Now we have Pa practically complete, but we haven't dressed him yet, so our next step is to shade in his clothes, and then draw in his hands. The hands are easy enough. They're really just a suggestion of hands, as you can see from my drawing. Draw all the preliminary steps in pencil, then ink over the completed figure and erase the pencil lines.

HANDS IMPORTANT

The importance of hands is better shown in the next picture. There we have Ma eyeing Pa with surprise and suspicion. But you had better wait until we have drawn Pa's skeleton before you try that one.

The next picture of Pa shows him struck with astonishment. Next time you see anybody get caught by surprise look at him carefully and you will notice that his hands fly up, his knees bend, and his body leans forward. Comic strip action is just an exaggerated picture of the way people really do act.

You can see from Pa's skeleton that he has just been shocked. Now go through the same steps as you did before. This time Pa's hands are drawn open. See how they help to create the impression?

A LECTURING MOOD

Now we see Ma in a lecturing mood. Her hands show that she is trying to impress something on Pa. She is pecking at the palm of one hand with the finger of the other to drive her words home. You should be able to fill in her body and clothes very easily, since her clothes cover most of her except her head and her feet.

In the next picture notice how the attitude of Pa's body adds to the expression of wonderment on his face. He is wondering, perhaps, what's the matter with Gertrude, who is evidently in a tantrum. The shadow under Gertrude's feet is important. It shows her to be jumping off the ground, and adds action.

Don't try to copy Gertrude as she is in this picture. Draw her skeleton, then fill in around it as you did before. Do the same thing with poor Ma, all fagged out at the end of a day's shopping in the next picture. Draw in her skeleton as you think it should be, fill in the drawing, and see how close you come to my drawing.

In the last picture you see Pa pretending to read, but glancing across at something else. Perhaps she has her eye on you as you try to draw her picture.

Try putting Pa and Ma in various attitudes, using the skeleton method. You will be surprised to find how easy it is to get the effects you want. Next take some of your own characters—you should have developed some by this time—and using the same method, try out various kinds of body actions with them.

Tomorrow another artist whose work appears all over the world, will show how he gets the laughs you enjoy every day.

The HEALTHIEST will profit most

JULY 4TH has been a turning point in the history of this country since Independence Day of 1776. The Civil War turned at Gettysburg, July 1-3, 1863. The Spanish War turned at Santiago, July 3, 1898. The last big depression drew to a close in July and ended in August, 1921. Good times begin in the Fall.

Are you getting ready?

Use the July 4th week-end as an investment in health. Make it a turning point in your courage. Take the youngsters with you and lunch under the trees. Breathe deep the fresh, clear air; look confidently to the future.

The past is behind us—leave it there. Remember, it will be true—as it always has been—the healthiest will profit most.

Here's to the up-turn. Come on!

"OLD IRONSIDES," THE FRIGATE CONSTITUTION OF the United States Navy, is again Queen of the Seas. At an impressive ceremony yesterday afternoon, held in the open at the Charlestown Navy Yard—which, by the way, is the oldest navy yard in the United States—the famous battleship was declared officially "in commission," and her colors were hoisted to the firing of the national salute of 21 cannon.

* * *

Today she departs on her cruise of patriotism and good will, a splendid tribute to the statesmanship and love of those to whom she owes her preservation and to the millions of men, women and children who contributed to the enormous sum which was necessary for the reconditioning.

* * *

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON

Our hearts glowed as we sat in the sunshine, poetically at her feet, and heard the brief addresses of representatives from nation, state and city, paying warm, sincere tribes to the men who commanded her, who designed her and whoconstructed her, all a factor in her glorious triumphs.

Rear Admiral Nulto Greets Guests

TO THE STIRRING STAINS OF A MARCH OF WELCOME by the Marine Band, ending at attention, each distinguished guest was welcomed by Rear Admiral L. M. Nulton, commandant of the Navy Yard, and escorted to the speakers' stand. And you will pardon us if we go a chuckle—we very often have to conceal our Irish grin—at the various costumes chosen by the visiting dignitaries. It mighthave been a masculina fashion parade of the year 1931.

* * *

THE REAR-ADMIRAL WAS in full dress uniform, very glittering and handsome; Rear-Admiral Philip Andrews, retired, who was the commandant last year at the Navy Yard and who made a very special effort to be present on this historical occasion, motored from Squehunet, Me., or some place, in the excessive heat, chose a natty blue coat and white flannels. He mopped his brow so consistently that we feel sure he wished he had worn a bathing suit.

* * *

HIS HONOR, THE MAYOR, arrived as a private citizen in business dress, and we think was the handsomest man on the platform—in fact, if somebody doesn't sculptor his head in bronze we will ask for the privilege of doing it ourselves. Senator Marcus Coolidge, from where we sat, appeared in his Japanese silk pajamas, and we were so intrigued we didn't hear a word of what he said, but, of course, shall read it in the morning papers.

* * *

JOSEPH B. ELY, OUR GOVERNOR, wore afternoon dress, morning coat, striped trousers and silk hat, and the gardenia was not missing, and President Hoover's representative from Washington, Ernest Lee Jahncke, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was also in formal dress. The principal speaker of the day—(and let us say it was a very interesting speech and mighty instructive historically, but claim that for such occasions brevity is the soul of wit)—Judge Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy when the movement for restoring Old Ironsides was begun, regaled himself in cutaway coat and straw sailor, comfortable but amusing.

Ships in Gala Dress

AND THEY WERE ALL surrounded by more gold braid and epaulets than we have ever seen. Something should be done about those epaulets; they were designed to fit the shoulder, not to hang off like Florida moss on trees, providing a shady nook for the elbows.

* * *

THE DEAR OLD NAVY YARD was all dressed up to receive callers, flags flying from every battleship, destroyer and cruiser in the harbor for the occasion, and the dear old frigate herself lost nothing by comparison with these modern dogs of war. Riding easily in her berth, with ropes and sails furled, colors flying, she looked ready to go, and as our governor so aptly said:

"In spite of the depletion of armies and navies today, she stands ready to perform again the noble service she rendered 134 years ago and the spirit which she represents. The spirit of 1797 can never be depleted."

* * *

THERE WERE REPRESENTATIVES from every walk of life attending these exercises, from the Grand Army to the Salvation Army. Mr. Thomas G. Frothingham was escort to the Grand Army.

* * *

REAR-ADMIRAL NULTON'S wife, Mrs. Nulton, was presented with a nosegay of roses tied with gold and blue ribbons. We saw Mrs. Larz Anderson going aboard the Constitution on a tour of inspection, Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Coolidge and more of Boston's elite. It was disappointing not to see them out in greater numbers with their young people. To have the past in the past and one in the future, literally on the threshold between the old and the new, would be a great event in the lives of our children and a memory that would live forever in their hearts, as it will in ours. God Save the United States of America and to her everlasting glory, Old Ironsides.

MRS. CHANNING WELLS IS returning from Europe this week with her daughter, Elizabeth, a deb of this past season, and will be at Wianno this summer. It is quite gay on that side of the Cape.

Elizabeth Wells

Season Starts With Bancroft Tea Sept. 4

For so early in the season, we seem to have quite a complete list of debutante affairs which begin about the middle of September and continue through January.

As far as we know Jane Bancroft will start the ball rolling with a tea at her parents' home in Cohasset, on September 4.

On the 12th of September, Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. J. Sidney Stone will have a tea in honor of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Stone, at the family place in Wayland. A week later, on the 26th, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Lee will entertain at a house-dance for their daughter, Isabella, in Wellesley.

October Events

During this month there also will be a dance at the Essex County Club, given in honor of Miss Anne Richardson, by her parents.

In October deb affairs really "get going," and something will be happening about three times a week. The first event slated for this month is a luncheon on the 8th, in honor of Miss Laura Bement, given by her grandmother, Mrs. Leonard Ware, at her estate in Framingham. Two days later, the 10th, Miss Elizabeth Allen will be presented at a tea-dance, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Glover Allen, in Cambridge.

On Friday, the 23d, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Chapin will present their daughter, Miss Martha Chapin, at a dance at The Country Club, and a few days later her grandmother will do the same for her at a tea at the Chilton Club. The same day, Friday, the 30th, will be the coming out of Miss Eliza Bowditch, daughter of Mrs. Sohier Welch, at the Fife-Charlton.

Debuts at Polo Club

November brings a very crowded calendar, but perhaps no more so than in years past. The first event is a tea on Wednesday, the 4th, for Miss Ellen Stone, given for her by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bowditch Stone, of Jamaica Plain. The following day, the 5th, Mrs. David J. Evans will also bring out her daughter at a tea, and also at the Chilton Club. And the next evening, the James Deans, who have already entertained at a luncheon for Dorothea, will formally present her at a dance, again at The Country Club.

On the 7th (you see how they come, in bunches), two debs will make the jump together at the Dedham Polo and Country Club—the Misses Jean Hall, daughter of Mrs. George Hall, and Margot Stanwood, charming daughter of Mrs. Calhoun Stanwood.

Then there is nearly a week's breathing space, though by that time the calender will probably be entirely complete, and on the 13th Mr. and Mrs. Horace Morison will present their daughter, Babette, at a dance. The next afternoon, the 14th, Mrs. Merrill Griswold will entertain for Miss Elizabeth Locke, at a tea-dance. Another tea falls on Thursday, the 19th, that given by Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop C. Adams for daughter Jean, at The Country Club. And two days later, on the 21st, Miss Catherine Blake will have a tea dance given in her honor by her mother, Mrs. Wm. O. Blake.

On the 24th, Mr. and Mrs. Barnard Trafford and Mr. and Mrs. John Richardson will combine in presenting their respective and charming daughters, the Misses Ada Trafford and Louise Richardson, at a dance at the Milton Club. The 27th is the date set for the tea that lovely Miss Ruth Coffin will be presented at by her parents. The first ball will be given by Mrs. F. Wainwright Perkins for her daughter, Miss Emily Perkins. It will be in November but the exact date has not been decided on.

On December the 2d, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bancroft are giving a dance for Jane at the Somerset, and on the 3d, Mr. and Mrs. Georgs Mathews will give a dance for daughter Anne at the Dedham Polo Club. There is going to be quite a toss-up that night as to whether to attend that or the ball, which, of course, always sounds more exciting, somehow, to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bird, Mrs. F. Wainwright Perkins (what—again?) and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Shurcliff, for the Misses Alma Bird, Emily Perkins and Elizabeth Shurcliff at the Somerset.

On the 4th, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus P. Loring will present their two granddaughters, the Misses Mary Loring and Louise Sargent.

On the 7th, another affair will be given for Miss Catherine Blake—a dance, by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Osborne Blake. And Mrs. David J. Evans is also repeating the procedure with a dinner-dance for daughter Lydia at the Chilton Club.

HORSE RACE DEVOTEES

Mr. Richard Stackpole and Miss Betty Blake are considering favorites at the races. Miss Blake is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Blake of Pine Cottage, Weston. Dick Stackpole is the son of the J. Lewis Stackpoles of Beacon st.

Paine-Potter Wedding in Garden

In the rose garden of the bride's summer home at Duxbury, last evening, Miss Hope Mary Potter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Clifford Potter of 962 Center st., Newton Center, became the bride of Charles Jackson Paine of Weston, son of Mrs. Guy Cox and the late Charles Paine. The Rev. Dr. Everett C. Herrick of West Newton officiated.

In Bridal Party

Mrs. Franklin K. Hoyt was matron of honor. Other bridal attendants were Miss Alens Potter, as maid of honor, and Miss Elinor Coues, Miss Katharine Nichols, Mrs. Frederick T. Potter, Miss Leona Hartstone, Miss Mary L. Sabine, from about Boston, and Miss Elenor Alexander of Cleveland O. Miss Eleanor Greene was flower girl.

Gilbert Graves of Weston served as the best man.

The ushers included Kenneth Martin, Arthur Bent, Frederick T. Potter, of Boston, and Frank R. Stubbs of Rowayton, Ct.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin trimmed with Berths of Brussels lace. Her tulle veil fell from a cap of rose point and Brussels lace, fastened with orange blossom sprays, and her bouquet was of white sweet peas and lilies of the valley.

In Pink Organdie

The matron of honor was gowned in pink organdie in old-fashioned style and carried a Colonial bouquet of sweet peas and roses.

The maid of honor wore blue organdie of the same style and carried a Colonial bouquet. Blue organdie over pink taffeta was selected for the other attendants, and they also carried Colonial bouquets.

Mr. Paine was graduated from the New Preparatory school at Cambridge and is well known in aviation circles. His bride attended the Lee school and was a member of the class of 1931 at Marot College.

Sports Fashion Is Practical

By ANN ARDEN

THE EMANCIPATED sports woman has fashion on her side this season—no one can effect a tomboy about the sports mode, it is too utterly diverting and smartly practical.

Shorts for active sports have been nudging their way into the spotlight for some time. They have been worn by social leaders on private courts and links in Florida and California for lo, these many suns.

* * *

THE AMATEUR cup contender pictured wears part of a most practical ensemble. The broadcloth tennis outfit consists of green shorts, made full by groups of pleats stitched to yoke depth and a sleeveless shirt of the same practical material toned cream beige, topped by narrow turnover collar and revers, and vestee front, extending to tab buttoning to shorts top. A pleated skirt is part of this outfit matching the shorts, and simply buttoned around one when the strenuous activity is finished, and cooling drinks in order.

* * *

THE TENNIS visor is a practical help, the white canvas tennis ties regulation, the "championship" balls fresh and peppy, and the "Davis Cup" racket a most able assistant. Of course, this costume is completely washable.

* * *

FOR ALL the tailored sports clothes of the summer a special sort of underwear is needed. Silk sort, of seems out of place with all the cotton and linen clothes—just a bit incongruous.

* * *

NOW THOSE who go in for harmony in all things are adopting little shorts, copied most faithfully after the boys' sets. They are made of striped broadcloth, the more vivid the striping the sportier, of course. Though some of them come in pastel colorings that are very charming.

* * *

TO GO with the little short pants there is a brassiere made simply, even to the point of severity. The binding is done in the color of the darker stripe, and so are the narrow straps that slide over the shoulders.

* * *

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs, or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WAAB.

100 BEST BOOKS ARE NOMINATED FOR CAN

By Gilbert Seldes

So far no scientist has isolated the germ which causes otherwise intelligent people to make up lists of the hundred best books. Next to making, and forgetting, household budgets, this seems to be the favorite occupation of people the moment they get a pencil in hand, and if you get around much, you will probably find the names of Franklin's "Autobiography," Homer and Emerson's "Essays" penciled on the walls of telephone booths.

One of the best uses for these lists is to make them a guide for non-reading; just paste the list in some prominent position and say to yourself, "Well, here are a hundred books I needn't bother about." In the first place, you won't read them even if you say you will, so frankness from the start will prevent the growth of a nasty conscience, and, what is more important, not reading these books will give you positive pleasure and time to read books you want to read, or to go roller skating, both of which are superior forms of entertainment.

Elimination Semi-Finals

A new development in list-making is compilation by comparison. One hundred educated Americans listed in "Who's Who" have contributed to a list issued by the American Library Association, and the faculty of the Science, Literature and Arts College of the University of Minnesota "guarantees" the value of another. (I am indebted to Mr. Ben Ray Redman for information of these two.) Robert E. Rogers, whom you will identify, unfairly, as the professor who told his students to be snobs, records another in the Boston American: a list of only 27 books which occur on all of the 20 best lists published. By a coincidence, Will Durant urges the purchase of exactly 27 books in his list of 100

Rolling down these two 27's, only six books remain: Gibbon's "Decline and Fall," "the Rubaiyat," Shakespeare's plays, Boswell's "Johnson," Goethe's "Faust" and Whitman's "Leaves of Grass." I can think of hardly any drearier reading than all the plays of Shakespeare, all of Boswell, or any part of "Faust" in translation (it may be interesting in the original). Omar and Whitman are comparatively brief, and every one who reads the magnificent Gibbon skips.

The list Mr. Rogers reports was made by the librarian of the Bell Telephone Company in Toronto, and Mr. Rogers is interested not so much in the titles surviving the process of elimination as in the fact that great industrial establishments have libraries and schools for the purpose of raising the cultural level of their employes. I have met dozens of cultivated and attractive and intelligent people who haven't read more than three of the chosen books; I am persuaded that 90 out of any 100 can be junked without serious loss, as required reading.

Why Only Books?

What is more, the system works only one way. If workers in steel mills are to acquire culture through reading, why shouldn't professional readers and writers acquire culture by observing the 100 crucial experiments in the history of steel making; why all this emphasis on reading when we never urge people to see the 100 best paintings, hear the 100 best musical compositions, and look at the 100 brightest stars? Why are the 100 (if there are 100) propositions of Euclid neglected always in favor of a collection of poems or short stories or novels? Mathematics, geography, economics, agriculture—where are they?

There are, I suppose, ten fine tales in "The Arabian Nights" and a few thousand noble lines in the "Odyssey"; whatever genius has imagined has its claim on our attention. But if I wanted to know the world in which I live, and put down durable thoughts into my mind, and learn how to think and to discriminate between good things and bad, I would not spend a week reading either of these classics through. At least, I wouldn't until I knew what biologists were up to, and how it happened that Gothic cathedrals were built in America, and why the Greeks believed that a man's future was before him and his past behind, and what is the relation between mathematics and music, and who was responsible for the Great War

I do not propose the substitution of other books for my chosen. The mind of the world is overawed by books as it is; print is a comparative newcomer in the Western world, and, although it is common enough, we respect it unduly. We revere the "Iliad" or "Elsie" (although we seldom read them and put down to a mere mechanical knack the invention of the reaper, which profoundly affected the world and the spirit of the whole world. Defoe dreamed a comparatively dull and unimportant dream about Robinson Crusoe on a desert island and he is remembered, when the men who dreamed and made railroads are forgotten. (Naturally, the writers keep the writers alive.)

Some time ago I read of the invention of a mechanical calculator which could solve, in two days, complex mathematical problems which would take human beings years to work out. I suppose everyone was struck by the ingenuity of putting a machine to work on such a scale. What worried me was that I hadn't the faintest conception of what the problems could be; I did not even have the data from which I could guess in what field the problems lay.

• • •

Is Einstein a Classic?

The four pages of type in which Einstein set down his theory are for ever barred from literature because they do not use the literary symbols, there are no adjectives and verbs, no fine descriptive passages; yet they are probably essential to the culture of the man of the next generation, if not of this. Karl Marx's "Capital" is not literature, but a civilization is being grown out of it.

A list of a hundred books (four years of reading, at seven hours a week, according to Durant) ought to give the reader a picture of the world. Most of them give a picture of a world which does not exist; they darken ignorance and shut down the doors of the mind. When you have read them, you can say, "I have read the hundred best books." It is a great conversational opening especially if you happen to be alone at the time.

It Might Be Worse

Is quite a common sight today
In cinematic dramas,
And still it is a shock to meet
A damsel strolling on the street

But though she walks the thoroughfare
With filmsiest flapping in the air,
It might be worse—she doesn't wear

Antiques

By the Reader

Once when The Reader was in a barber shop in Boston all lathered and prostrate, a citizen entered and held up a chair.

"Is this a Duncan Phyfe?"

The barber lifted his head just five seconds, grunted a no, and the citizen, who had just attended an auction, left crestfallen. An authority had spoken, and there was no need for argument. Was it intuition, or what?

"Any fool who knows tools could see that Phyfe wouldn't go about making a chair that way."

• • •

What kind of tools went to the making of antiques? And why? What sort of wood was chosen, and for what reason? Also, why were certain shapes favored, and why were those things made then but not now?

It is to clear up these mysteries that Marion Nicholl Rawson wrote "When Antiques Were Young" (Dutton).

A great deal of ancient stuff is trash, it must be admitted. The second-hand and antique shops, which do a hundred million dollars' worth of business a year, cannot but foster much wrong evaluation. Unlike wine and the classics, such objets de horreur as cast-iron deer, Rogers' groups, bustles, four-poster catafalques and plush walnut rockers are none the better for being old.

• • •

Miss Rawson disdains such junk, doesn't mention them, in fact. She sticks close to honest and useful wares. Our pioneer life centered in the kitchen. Hence, the settees, the bread trough, the solid chairs, pots and kettles done as much for pride as for livelihood by the village brass-beater.

From samples, Miss Rawson reconstructs the social life of those primitive, and, on the whole, rather boisterous days As muca couldn't be done for this age with the machine-made things in a modern department store. The machine means nothing more than mass production turned out for profit by a machine owner

• • •

Hence, beautiful and honestly made antiques have a value also to the historian They are a clue to how people lived and thought in another epoch

A lecturer in this city gave a talk in which he reconstructed the artistic life of the ancient Egyptians from an earthenware pot. A century hence it would be difficult to do the same for the fellaheen of 1931. The Nile peasantry nowadays tote their water in five-gallon Standard Oil tins.

Young Man of Manhattan

If given opportunity
I'd make a model host
My social grace the boast
Of any swell community.

If Chance had willed it so,
We'd gaze, the two of us,
On traffic's ebb and flow,
With limousined immunity—

But ah, my love, we know
Fate would not have it thus—
And in my impecunity,
We'd better take a bus!

His future is "gray"—
A future of sorrow.
He lives for today,
Forgetting tomorrow.

Reno Love

By Agnes W. Smith

They tell me that men and women are going to Reno these days whether they want a divorce or not. Returning tourists, who have been there on business, report that there is no place like it.

I suppose that, inspired by the comedy possibilities of the Arne-Vanderbilt feud, progressive playwrights and fiction writers will be flocking to Nevada looking for atmosphere and drama, if they can explain the strictly artistic nature of their mission to their wives.

Couples who think that they are happily married would do well to spend their vacations in Reno. Their sojourn would be in the nature of a test. Men and women who look upon marriage as something that must be accepted because it cannot be abrogated without a great deal of scandal and trouble might do well to expose themselves to the temptations of Reno.

There the law is not stern but benign; its courts stand ready to humor the whims of the feeble and faint-hearted.

• • •

If a marriage could survive three months in Reno's light-headed atmosphere where freedom may be had for the asking, then both husband and wife could return home confident of celebrating their Golden Wedding together.

G. K. Chesterton once wrote that marriage was devised to keep men and women from leaving each other after the honeymoon. Reno outwits this idea by making divorce almost as easy as marriage and by surrounding these proceedings which ordinarily are a little sad and sordid with an aura of festivity and gayety.

• • •

The city stands as a visible symbol of our high-flown ideals of marriage. It is our national code to "marry for love" and I am willing to wager that almost all the men and women who are crowding the courts of Reno "married for love."

It is, in fact, considered indecent to marry for anything but love. In our books and plays, when the heroine feels that she is being forced into a realistic marriage, she simply cries, "But, Mother, I do not love Trevor Cavandish. My heart belongs to Teddy McSwade!"

That is supposed to end the argument, whereas it is really the starting point. What in one is brave enough to remind the romantic heroine that marriage for love—and nothing else —requires almost super-human strength of character; and that, when a love match fails, it is more than a defeat—it is a disaster.

• • •

Fortunately for the good name of our national matrimonial statistics, not all the love matches are actually love matches. A girl may proclaim to anyone who will listen that she is madly in love with Henry and that he is the Only Man in the World. But she is probably understating the depths of her emotions.

Her real reasons are much more profound and sensible. If she were to tell the truth, she would say: "I am marrying Henry because I want a home of my own. Every woman of twenty-five deserves the dignity, security and freedom of her own home. My parents annoy me—I will not only disappoint them but I will be a source of inconvenience and embarrassment to them.

• • •

"Henry has a good position. When he marries me, it will be up to him to work himself into a better one. He needs a home and responsibilities. I like children. Perhaps Henry likes them, too. Anyway, he is going to learn to like 'em

"He is not my Dream Prince. If he were any better looking, he would be conceited and other women would run after him. If he were any richer, he would want a more spectacular type of wife. If he were any cleverer, I wouldn't be able to manage him. I am doing well for myself and so is Henry."

And if Henry were truthful, he would speak as follows: "I've certainly known better-looking girls than Lucinda. However, I think I can get along with Lucinda and furthermore I need a home. This way of living gets me nowhere. If I marry and settle down, I will get better business breaks. All the old crowd are married and hanging around isn't as much fun as it used to be.

• • •

"As for children, very little babes are a total loss. The children of my friends are nothing but a bunch of annoying urchins. But my children, of course, will be different.

"I like Lucinda. If she were very beautiful, I would always be worrying about other men If she were very clever, I would have to play second fiddle. If she were very rich, she would be too independent of me. I have done pretty well for myself—and so has Lucinda."

• • •

So Henry and Lucinda are married and all their friends proclaim it a love match. Their respective parents secretly hope that it is no such thing.

Henry's parents suspect that maybe, in spite of her talk, Lucinda is a sensible girl and will cure Henry of some of his nonsense. Lucinda's parents long for the day when Henry, no longer a romantic suitor, will put his foot down on some of Lucinda's foolishness.

In spite of their pretensions, Henry and Lucinda will establish a home that will be ruled and managed by realistic laws. They will tactfully forget that they "married for love" and will face their mutually selfish task of achieving comfort and security.

Nor will they go to Reno.

Because, while Reno dissolves many marriages, it breaks up few homes.

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

WISE GUY

"Man About Town" . . . Wise guy . . . Uh-huh . . . Man about town . . . Gets around to all the hot spots . . . Meets all the wise guys . . . Knows where that smart money is placed . . . Man about town . . . That's me . . . Wise guy . . . Y-E-A-H! . . . That's what I thought until I went to Rockingham Wednesday to the races . . . Man about town . . . SUCKER!" 'Man About Town" left enough up there to buy a horse.

This racket of playing the "favorites" is the hooey . . . Form my eye! . . . After this I'm going to play hunches . . . The one hunch bet I made all day long was a win bet . . . "Street Singer" . . . I bet on it because it was a Shubert show and, in my off moments, I'm a Shubert slave.

Wonder if I can call my city editor the idea that betting issues come under the heading of legitimate expenses? . . . (Note from City Ed.: Not a chance!) . . . I'm off tipsters for life . . . (On second thought I have, though, is that none of the rest of the gang up covering the meet fared any better than I did . . . Oh, yes, I know Ruth Mugglebee says that she made a cleanup but that's the bunk!

Take Arthur (Bostonherald) Siegel for example . . . Arthur came all the way up to New Hampshire with a hot tip to play, "Street Singer" (My hunch bet), in the fifth race . . . But after Arthur arrived at the track and listened to all the talk of the dopesters who were whooping it up for "Head to Hand" and "Come On" (There's a swell name for a horse for you!) he got cold feet and didn't bet on any of 'em . . . The result was that a few minutes later Arthur sat in the press box and called himself a nice assortment of names while he watched "Street Singer" come romping down the stretch an easy winner.

AMONG THOSE PRESENT

Sammy Fuller, with two black eyes as souvenirs of his work in the ring a few nights ago, and Sammy (Sundayadvertisers) Cohen were playing "Shasta Sun" In the third race and nearly went haywire when, as the horses were at the post, "Shasta Sun" became unruly and broke away, throwing its rider and proceeding to run twice around the track before it could be stopped and led away to the stables

Let's see, now, who did we see in the enclosure? . . . Well, George (ad agency) Wiswell, celebrating his birthday, was there with Mrs W. (nee Florence Campbell, who used to be one of those two voices with a smile on the Boston Herald switchboard) and a party that included Mr. and Mrs. Alan Wood, Alan Wood, Sr., and several others . . . After the meet the party adjourned to the Nashua Country Club to continue the celebration . . . I saw Hayard Tuckerman, notable gentleman rider and host to the Prince of Wales when he was in this country last, and Robert Purcell, of Flying Horse Farm, both of the Eastern Horse Club . . .

In the press box we saw John Barry of the Globe, Arthur Siegel of the Herald, Ruth Muggleben of the American, George Kirkwood of the American, Eddie Place of the Transcript (bread "A," please!), Walter Kiley of the Traveler, Howard Reynolds of the Post, Eddie Hurley of the Record, Fred Murkland of the Traveler, who was assigned to come up to the track just 10 minutes before train time "to see if there was any betting going on!" . . . Heh-heh-heh!

EDDIE MACK THERE

Then there was Eddie Mack with Mrs. Mack and their charming daughter, "Chuck" ("Man-about-town") Weathers, Former Corporation Counsel Mark Sullivan—Did you ever try to concentrate on writing a column while someone in the next room is playing "Body and Soul"?—and Charlie Snyder premier photographer.

Georgie Price, Broadway musical comedy star, was there too and when we told him that we were playing "Street Singer" as a hunch because there had been a Shubert show by that name, George flipped "If you win on it that will be the first money that show ever made

Eddie Spellman, Hugo Lundgren, Carol Sullivan, Arthur Manley, Tommy Roche, and Sammy Stern—all from Boston theater box offices—are on the job selling tickets, smiling and gracious as ever

Another thing that bumbled me all the way up I kept reading signs on those roadside stands offering "Witch Toast" to tempt my palate . . . Wotthahell is witch toast can you tell me? . . . Then after being taken to the clinic I crawled meekly into Joe DiPesa car and was whisked back to Boston with Joe and Jerry Dunn all just as we were about to cross the Prison Point Bridge, I looked up and saw a rainbow forming the Customs House tower . . . Me with my thoughts—I should be looking at rainbows . . . Some of those nags may have been bred in Kentucky, but they were only crumbs at Rockingham to me!

"Man About Town" . . . Wise Guy! . . . Yeah? . . . Man About Town . . . SUCKER!

WOULD HOLD BANKERS FOR $4,000,000

Manchester, N. H., July 2 (AP)—State Banking Commissioner Willard B. Tuttle today asked the Hillsborough County Superior Court to declare the trustees of the defunct Merrimack River Savings Bank liable for all losses arising out of their alleged negligence in supervision.

The bank was closed on June 3, 1930, and, according to John E. McLane, the liquidating agent, the loss to depositors will probably total $4,000,000.

Suit for $3,000,000 was instituted shortly after the bank closed against Arthur H. Hale, treasurer, who has been declared bankrupt, and is awaiting sentence after conviction of misappropriation.

The defendants include Mayor Arthur E. Moreau, George M. Clark, merchant, and Abraham F. Robinson, former assistant treasurer of the bank.

NEW REGISTRAR WARNS OF 4TH

Six safety rules for the holiday week-end and a general warning to drivers were issued today by Morgan T. Bragg, newly appointed registrar of a new administration in the office of motor vehicle commissioner.

Here are his rules.

2.—Start your outing early, allow plenty of time to go and return, thus avoid nervous hurrying, and enjoy driving at moderate, reasonable speed.

3.—Drive with the utmost caution at railroad crossings.

4.—If caught in heavy traffic, be patient and do not cut in and out of line.

5.—Refrain from tossing lighted fireworks out of autos, lest someone be killed or injured.

6.—Drive wisely, watch and, above all, soberly.

Boston's observance of the 155th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence will be in accordance with other years, with the reading of the document from the balcony of the Old State House at 9 a. m.

Paul G. Curley, son of the mayor, will this year read the Declaration of Independence.

Other city activities of the day include an address at noon on the Common by Mayor Curley, the launching of the fleet of [illegible] at the Public Gardens Pond in the afternoon and [illegible] and band concerts at Jamaica Pond, the Common, Franklin Field and Columbus Park at night.

THIS IS LIFE

NEW GAMES MAY RAGE BUT DOMINOS AND CRAP LIVE ON

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

LAST SPRING, I BELIEVE IT WAS, a canny fire department chief warned the insurance underwriters to watch out for fires in miniature golf layouts. (Or may be it was a fire underwriter who warned the police. Or somebody.) Anyway, whoever it was knew something about American crowd psychology. Not that I have noticed any reports of fires in those quaint looking establishments. I haven't. Which probably means that miniature golf proprietors are an honest lot, in spite of poor business.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

But perhaps they are only holding on for some warm weather and the boredom which comes in the middle of the summer, when you have gone to all the picnics your digestion can stand, and got so completely sunburned that even another coat can't possibly add to your glory, and come back from your vacation only to find all your friends away on their vacation—and nothing to do in the long summer evenings. Then, possibly, the miniature golf business will pick up. But at present the prospects seem to be a little chilly for the sanguine souls who last summer leased acres and acres of ground and weeded them and levelled them and then unlevelled them again and filled them with curious contraptions that made the places look like a cross between a musical comedy Japanese tea garden and the famous Chautauqua relief map of the Holy Land.

* * *

We're Fickle in Our Amusements

People do not seem to be playing miniature golf any more—much. We are a fickle people. Our enthusiasms are rapid in their growth, enormous at their peak, and correspondingly quick and devastating in their decline. Francois Villon noticed the same thing about popular taste in one of his most famous ballades, translated loosely, of course.

Tell me in what hidden way is Lovely Flora who played Ma-jong?
From the reports all I can say is
That's not been played for ever so long
Expensive sets now sell for a song.
"East wind, west wind" you never hear
Except, perhaps, in some Chinese tong—
Where are the games of yesteryear?

Many and many a novel play is
Boosted a time and going strong,
But you can wager its little day is
Short and fleeting and then "so long"!
Pillow-dex, Pit, Rook, and Ping-pong
(That's made a come-back, though, my dear),
Ring the funeral bell ding-dong—
Where are the games of yesteryear?

Like to the Scriptural green bay is Every little amusement fad.
No matter how secure its away is,
Comes a time when it's just too bad!
And the Parker Brothers (not an ad.)
Have to invent something new to cheer
And inebriate every lass and lad—
Where are the games of yesteryear?

Prince—Backgammon comes to the fore,
Miniature golf falls back to the rear,
And the first shall be last as it was of yore—
So with the games of yesteryear!

If I ever invented a game I should hope that it would not be one likely to be taken up by the social play-boys and play-girls. If past performances are any guide to go by, Euchre and Hearts and Pinochle and Five Hundred, and even plain, old-fashioned Whist, will outlast Contract Bridge and will still be played when society has turned to a new and more complicated and more "scientific" versions of that game. Camelot will come and go, likewise Backgammon, but Checkers will still be played in heaven.

* * *

The Old Games Live on

All sorts of children's games are invented and forgotten, but Dominos, Parcheesi and Authors live on. And curiously enough most children's new games are only variants of one of these three. Racquets and Badminton (the old Battledore and Shuttlecock) are going strong, but can anyone of them touch old-fashioned Horseshoe Pitching for permanence? And society will lose interest in Ping-pong centuries before the rest of the world stops playing Billiards and Pool. And as for Crap—!

Tennis courts are expensive, but wherever there are three—two children and a bit of mangy lawn—there will be old-fashioned Croquet. In fact, one of the strongest arguments in support of my theme is the fact that the high-brow literary set of New York, people who have tried everything in the world and whose eyelids are a little weary, have fallen back on such simple sports as Charades and Anagrams and Croquet for their amusements, leaving the new inventions to the bored smart set.

Nevertheless, and in spite of everything, it is a pity we as a people lose interest so quickly. The louder the hurrah with us, the quicker the oblivion. And not with games only. With more serious things. There was a time when most people in the United States seemed to be going in for "the simple life" with Pastor Wagner, or for "every day in every way we are growing better and better" with M. Coue. There was a time when, as Lincoln Steffens remembers ruefully, we really seemed interested in political reform and muck-raking. Hollywood is full of picture stars whom the public has forgotten. And politics full of lame ducks who have been heaved out of office for no stronger reason, apparently, than that a new personality has come along.

Is it a characteristic of us as Americans or of our people as a democracy? Edmund Burke believed that a democracy was thoroughly irresponsible. And Rudyard Kipling called it bandar-log, the monkey people, who sang "Now we're going to —never mind! Brother, thy tail hangs down behind." Is the decline of miniature golf, last summer's sensation, symptomatic of an important defect in our national character? Or does it show that we have more sense than we seem to have?

GOOD LUCK WAS THEIRS

Although their brother's boat capsized, throwing him and their two sisters into the water, Robert Binney, 13, and Marshall Binney, 12, kept right on to the finish line, winning their race.

Back Bay Youngsters Give a Fine Display of Courage During Nahant Race

Versatile sailors, these boys and girls of the Back Bay Binney family.

While two were flushed with victory today for their catboat activities off Nahant yesterday, three others were unperturbed by a dip in the briny.

The exciting events came during the semi-weekly Montycat races of the Nahant Dory Club.

Nearly a mile offshore Skipper William, 11, was [illegible] Skipper Robert, 13, [illegible] most of the [illegible].

William and his crew, Susan, 16, and Esther, 15, were thrown into the deep and struck out for the overturned craft while Robert continued on to the finish line with his crew consisting of Marshall, 12.

Capt. Charles F. Kemp, daddy of the races for society children, put out in his motorboat and brought the children safely to shore where Dr. William G. Appleton, their grandfather, was waiting.

The children are sons and daughters of the late Dr. and Mrs. George H. Binney of Commonwealth av. They make their home with Dr. Appleton.

IRONSIDES PUTS TO SEA AGAIN

The frigate Constitution, once a mighty instrument of war, put to sea for the first time in 40 years today, but this time as messenger of peace.

To the accompaniment of shrieking sirens of harbor craft and the cheers of assembled throngs, "Old Ironsides" left her berth in the navy yard bound for Portsmouth, N. H., and a cruise along the Atlantic coast.

The famous old warship, which has been recommissioned as part of the American navy after being reconditioned, flung no canvas to the breeze but was towed by the minesweeper [illegible].

No ceremonies marked her departure, the exercises which preceded the recommissioning of the ship having taken place on her quarter deck yesterday.

From Portsmouth the ship will go to Bar Harbor and other New England points before proceeding down the coast to Yorktown, Va., to participate in the sesquicentennial celebration in October.

Gathered on the pier as the ship was hauled out were 350 employes of the yard, headed by Rear Admiral Louis M. Nulton. With him were his wife and Judge Curtiss D. Wilbur, former Secretary of the Navy, under whose administration the work of reconstructing the Constitution was ordered.

CANADA ALIENS' STATUS FIXED

Conditions under which Canadian aliens permanently resident in the United States may re-enter this country after vacation trips to Canada were clarified today by Mrs. Anna C. M. Tillinghast, U. S. Immigration Commissioner.

Canadians who have lived continuously in the United States since 1906 should carry an affidavit attesting length of residence here. Presented to immigration officials at the point of re-entry, the affidavit will eliminate any difficulty.

Those who entered after 1906 should refer authorities to the record of their original entry.

Should no record of original entry be available, their status may be legalized by registration at local immigration headquarters.

Canadians who entered this country after July, 1928, should carry identification cards bearing their photographs. These cards are proof of their legal admission and should assure their re-admission without difficulty.

THREAT WRITER PUT IN ASYLUM

Robert Ringrose, former Boston wool merchant, today lost his fight against commitment to a state institution for sanity tests.

Arraigned in Dedham district court charged with sending threatening letters to Robert L. Studley, wealthy wool merchant, Ringrose was ordered by Judge Clifford B. Sanborn to Medfield Insane Hospital for a ten-day observation period.

Ringrose, former employe of the man he is charged with threatening, admitted in court he had often declared in letters that he contemplated suicide.

"I am not insane," he said. "I wrote the letters when I was desperate. I dont believe it should concern anyone else if I wanted to destroy myself. There were laws before the legislature made laws."

DIGGING FOR REAL WORK

They're planting derricks in the hole for Boston's new post office and if they grow into a forest of steel masts Boston will some day see a 21-story building. Callugi Cardivo, one of the workmen employed by the George F. Watts Equipment Co., is making a place for a derrick at the start of the preconstruction work. (Staff Photo.)

WORK ON NEW P. O. STARTED

Actual construction work on the new Boston postoffice began today. Honest!

A huge air-compressor, a foreman and a group of laborers roped off the area in which foundation drilling will be done. Great derricks will stand in the long vacant area within three days, representatives of N. P. Severin Co., Chicago contractors promised.

On the space which for so long has been the butt of tart comment "We'll part the municipal cow there," said Mayor Curley—the 21-story building that will cost $4,648,-900 will begin to take form.

The Severin Co. got the job after three series of bids had been considered. New England granite will be used for the exterior as the result of bitter controversy over the suggestion for limestone.

KELSEY SEEN IN ATLANTIC CITY

Mrs. George A. Kelsey today was informed at her home in Hanover that her husband, thought to have eloped with Mrs. Ethel Baker, "pajama girl" with whom he was arrested June 17 on charges of intoxication, was seen Tuesday in Atlantic City with a woman answering Mrs. Baker's description.

According to a friend of Mr. Kelsey, the couple were sitting in a parked car near a nightclub.

Mrs. Baker was arraigned in court attired in pajamas after she was arrested at the wheel of Kelsey's car. Police said she had no license, and was operating on Kelsey's.

Kelsey's two small children, with their mother in her temporary home in Hanover, today were still demanding that their father return.

Kelsey and Mrs. Baker defaulted their appearance in court and Mrs. Kelsey declared she believed her husband had deserted her for the blond young woman.

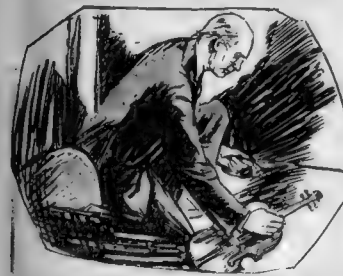
DAILY TRUE STORY

FRAYING ENDS



OLD LUIGI PICKED UP THE VIOLIN

LUIGI PARODI climbed the creaking stairs and went down the hallway, lit only by a flickering gas jet. He fumbled with the lock of a door that finally yielded to his efforts. Then he entered his top-floor room.

Luigi gently laid the black case he was carrying on one end of the bed and sat down at the other without even removing his frayed hat or shabbier coat.

He sat near enough on the creaky bed so that his lean fingers could caress the black case. For that case contained Luigi's one prized possession—his violin.

It was dark in his room, for the simple reason that Luigi had been unable to pay for light used for several months past. A little later the moon would shine in through his window, lighting its drab cornice. Already the sky was lightening over the housetops, where the moon was arching upward.

But Luigi shrugged his shoulders wearily. Tonight he would not see the moonlight. By the time it shone into his squalid room he would be beyond such earthly things. For Luigi had determined that the struggle for life had become too unequal.

Smiled in Dark
Life Meant Little Now

He smiled in the dark of his room, as his hand rested lightly on the black case. Life meant so little now, where once it had meant so much.

In his three score years he had known poverty, then wealth and applause, and again poverty. He did not fail at life for its sudden transitions. It was life! From that there was one escape.

Unwittingly Luigi loosened the clasps of the black case took out his violin and held it a moment across his knee.

"After all," he thought, "should I not play just one more selection before . . ."

He nodded silent assent, picked the bow out of the case, and raised the violin to his chin.

Luigi did not need the glare of footlights to play his violin. He could play it equally well in the darkness of his room, or beneath some flickering street lamp as he had so often done of late.

And while Luigi drew his bow softly over the strings, formless memories were awakened. Memories of days in old Florence and Milan, when he had risen to fame from his former role of a humble Italian shepherd boy. Later he had crossed the plains of Lombardy up into Vienna—the Vienna of Schubert and Strauss, and the city that claimed Beethoven in later life.

Luigi started at the recollection. Even now it was the first movement from Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata" that he was playing. In Vienna, in gay Vienna of long ago, he had played it to the attentive audience, stirring them to prolonged applause.

Now it was somewhat in the nature of a requiem. When the piece was finished there would be no applause this time. Instead he would lay aside his beloved violin.

Luigi trembled at that thought. Parting with his violin was his one regret. He had kept it always, despite the troubles that had beset him. There had been times when he had been sorely tempted to pawn it for the sake of a few good meals. But he had resolutely resisted even those impulses. Only an artist could understand that phase of Luigi's character.

Playing Faltered
Notes Died Into Silence

For an instant Luigi faltered in his playing, the notes dying into silence. Then with an effort he resumed the piece with all its fine tempo and rhythm.

But the thought of his violin would not be stilled. If he carried out his former resolve he would be forever parted from his beloved violin. It would find its way into some pawnshop or second-hand store. Luigi shuddered at this thought. His violin. No, that would never do!

The "Moonlight Sonata" was ended. Regretfully Luigi lowered his violin, resting it across his knees once more. For a moment he waited expectantly . . . for what, he knew not. Then he realized. This time there could be no applause; there would never be any applause if he laid aside his violin forever.

He was conscious then that he had played his violin, not alone for his own pleasure, but for the delight that his playing gave to others. That was the secret of his past success. The magic touch had been a gift to bring joy to others.

The moonbeams stealthily entered his room as he sat in deep thought, shining over his shoulders and glinting against the strings of his violin. Moonlight sonata! The strings of his violin were touched with the moonlight, as he had drawn the melodic strains of the "Moonlight Sonata" from them with nimble fingers.

That decided Luigi, that, and the thought that his violin had for so long been a source of pleasure to countless thousands. To lay it aside now would be a cowardly thing.

Quickly he put the violin and bow back in the black case, shut its clasps and rose eagerly to his feet. With a light heart Luigi left the room, descended the darkened stairways and went out on the sidewalk.

A few blocks away he stopped on a street corner. Light-hearted crowds were coming out of the theatre and movies, filling the sidewalks with their chattering groups. But none were so light-hearted now as Luigi as he took his violin from its case and began playing again the "Moonlight Sonata."

And tonight Luigi Parodi played as firmly and resonantly as he had ever done in old Florence or Vienna. People stopped to listen, as they often had before. Coins clinked into his frayed hat. Luigi nodded pleasantly, without slackening his playing.

His beloved violin was again bringing joy to others, and Luigi smiled at the thought of ever laying it aside while he was capable of joyful giving.

CROWLEY ORDERS 'VICE-GRAFT' SHOWDOWN

DEMANDS FULL REPORTS FROM PATROLMEN

Capt. Gallivan of the Lagrange St. Station Stands Up for His Men

Investigation of vice graft in Boston, which has split the ranks of high police officials, took a new turn today when written reports were demanded from a number of patrolmen of Lagrange st. station.

After a conference with Deputy James A. McDevitt and Capt. Jeremiah Gallivan, Supt. Michael H. Crowley ordered reports from all officers who have done duty when vice conditions were reported to have existed on the route which includes Essex st.

It was in an Essex st. hotel that Mary Sawyer, 19-year-old white slave, formerly of Bangor, Me., was arrested and claimed to have paid $80 graft to a policeman.

The girl, held in the House of the Good Shepherd pending appearance in court, also told police officials she had given the officer a drink when she paid the money.

She has declared herself unable to identify the patrolman, because, she says, the corridor where the money was passed, was dark.

For that reason a lineup of patrolmen of Lagrange st. station has not been ordered.

The girl's statement was taken by a police stenographer in the House of the Good Shepherd in the presence of Deputy McDevitt.

Capt. Gallivan of Lagrange St. station insisted at today's conference that he be given an opportunity to clear the names of his men.

It was reported that Supt. Crowley preferred to await receipt of the written reports from officers of the division who had covered the Essex st. route, before deciding on a lineup.

Meantime the probe of the vice conditions has been widened to include every section of the city.

New and complete reports on every speakeasy, gambling house and lodging house suspected of being a vice resort will be demanded from every division commander.

MASKED THUGS ROB 4 IN AUTO

Three armed men in a stolen auto staged three holdup robberies of motorists in Medford and Winchester early today. Women passengers were not robbed.

Two of the gunmen were masked with handkerchiefs. In North st., Medford, they held up Harry D. Caldwell of 40 Chauncey st., Wakefield, who had stopped to fix a tire and robbed him of $68.

Later at Sagamore ave. and High st., Medford, Benjamin Schuiz of 5361 Forest Hills st., New York City, arriving with Miss Grace Geary of 321 Broadway, Somerville, stopped to light a cigarette.

He was robbed of $125 and a pair of eyeglasses valued at $27. Miss Geary got the registration number of the bandit car and it was found to have been stolen in Lexington.

The third holdup was in Border rd., Winchester, where Peter Zacks and Michael Schyrensky, of Leverett and Poplar sts., West End, were parked in a car with a girl whose name was not obtained. He lost $25.

Trackworker Hit by Piece of Steel

A flying piece of steel today punctured the chest of Jeremiah Sheehan, 23, of Ferrin st., Charlestown, as it rebounded from a blow of a pick while he was working on the tracks of the New Haven railroad in Forest Hills.

In City Hospital it was said his condition is not serious.

TONIC CAP STILL INSIDE BOY

Graham Alfstrom in City Hospital grinned through his fifth day of harboring a tonic bottle cap.

The three-year-old Charlestown boy swallowed the cap Saturday night and since then has been less disturbed than doctors about the whole thing.

At noon today the bottle cap had been inside him for 115 hours, as of which it remained in his torso.

Monday it moved to his stomach, a position that gave doctors some concern over the prospects of an operation.

Gangrenous developments that usually show in less than 72 hours have not appeared yet, however, and physicians are "watchfully waiting" for the object to move.

Graham's only concern seems to be the daily visit of his mother. Between her visits, a contents himself with "following" patients in the children's division ward 1.

THICK FOG TIES UP SHIPPING

A heavy fog borne shoreward on an east wind today was intermittently impeding navigation in Boston harbor and down the coast.

The steamer Boston, due at India wharf at 8 o'clock this morning was still lying off Deer Island at noon, waiting for the haze to clear sufficiently to give her safe passage.

The Cunard liner Transylvania due from New York at noon, was creeping slowly through the fog and scheduled to call at Boston not earlier than 6 this evening.

PAL OF DYING BOY'S FATHER IS HUNTED

Search for an ex-soldier for questioning in connection with the mysterious injury of 12-year-old Joseph Francis James of 81 Webster ave., Cambridge, was launched throughout New England today as the boy lay near death at Mary Lane hospital, Ware.

State police investigating the mystery declare that the boy's injuries are such that they could not have been received merely by a fall from an automobile on the highway in Hardwick, where he was found unconscious.

He has three scalp wounds, one on the forehead over the left eye, and two on the top of the head, and the skull is penetrated.

When Police Chief Buckley of Ware asked the boy today what happened to him, Joseph mumbled "I don't know."

Asked how he got to Harwick, he did not answer.

SAVED BY OPERATION

A delicate emergency operation by Dr Ernest L. Hunt of Worcester City Hospital saved the boy's life last night, but doctors at the hospital said today it would be three days before they would venture to gauge his chances of complete recovery.

The man sought served with the boy's father Joseph E James at Fort Revere in Boston Harbor with the Coast Artillery Corps about four years ago.

Efforts to find him through the management of a circus with which he told James he was connected have been unsuccessful. James does not know his name. He was entertained at the Campridge home Monday night and started out to take the boy for "a short ride" the next morning, failing to return.

SISTER WAS INVITED

Agnes Kelley, elder stepsister of the injured boy, disclosed today that the ex-soldier also invited her to go on the ride but she refused.

State police of the Brookfield barracks, assisted by the Connecticut State police and local authorities in numerous cities and towns are engaged in the search but they are handicapped by the fact that neither the injured boy's father nor his stepsister are sure of the name.

"It was either McKay or McCahill, or something like those names," said the father, and Miss Kelley's memory of it was no better.

Agnes, who is 19, reached the hospital before her stepfather and was taken in Joseph's bedside. He muttered "Hello." When she grasped his hand and asked him how he felt, he said courageously, "Swell," which brought tears to he eyes.

Chief Buckley will question the boy's father to learn more about the mysterious friend.

VIRGINIA VALLI GIVEN LEADING ROLE IN "NIGHT LIFE IN RENO"

Ray Cannon Will Direct Divorce Mill Yarn for Independent Company

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc

Los Angeles, July 2—It looked for a time as if Virginia Valli was going to be content just to be Mrs. Charlie Farrell. The breaks haven't been coming Virginia's way these past few years, and it seemed fairly logical that, happily married to Charlie, she would definitely put aside all thoughts of her career.

Harriet Parsons knows but what the next turn of the wheel will see them both at the top?

Hence, there is particular interest in the news that Virginia will have the lead in "Night Life in Reno." (No, little gossip-hounds—there's nothing prophetic in that title.)

Ray Cannon directs this latest divorce mill yarn for Supreme Pictures, Inc., a small independent company. He has lined up a promising cast in Dorothy Christy, Jameson Thomas, Dixie Lee, Clarence Wilson, Arthur Housman and Pat O'Malley.

Virginia was a star when Charlie was an extra boy. Now Charlie is the star. Who

Miriam Hopkins Given Leading Role

Yesterday I timidly advanced the suggestion that it might be nice to have Lois Moran bring to the screen the role which she created in "This Is New York," stage play to be filmed by Paramount. But word comes today that Phillips Holmes and Miriam Hopkins are to be co-starred in the Sherwood hit. Most of Paramount not to let me cast this picture for them. I just have to have something to amuse me now that the cross-word puzzle has gone out of style. Oh, well—Phil and blonde Miss Hopkins are both good, so I can't complain.

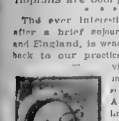
The ever interesting Swanson, after a brief sojourn in France and England, is wending her way back to our practically deserted village. During her absence United Artists has lined up players for her next picture, "Tonight Or Never. Robert Gregg, Gloria Meyer, Warburton Gamble and Mitchell Lewis, all from the original New York cast and Alison Skipworth will support Will Gloria Swanson



Gloria. I wonder just how much this current "original New York cast" gag means to fans, many of whom wouldn't know a Broadway cast from a Medicine Hat stock company. It has, of course, the advantage of bringing capable new actors to the screen - but if the movie-goers like them, they don't care whether they're from New York or Peoria.

Shirley Grey, the young lady whom Sam (Columbus) Goldwyn plucked from an Oakland stock company and put under personal contract, will play opposite Richard Dix in "Secret Service." Apropos of Radio, Lily Damita sails July 31 on the Ile De France for a six weeks' vacation. She has one more picture to do for Radio when she gets back.

AT STATE TOMORROW

Leslie Howard and Norma Shearer are featured in "A Free Soul," which comes to the Loew State screen tomorrow.

Light Opera Revivals Planned

The presentation of light opera revivals will be resumed by Jolson's Theater Musical Comedy company at Jolson's theater in New York, beginning in September, it is announced by the Messrs. Shubert, who sponsored the first season. The revival plan is to be undertaken on a larger scale than was the case two years ago. Jolson's Theater will be used as the production center, and revivals will be made simultaneously in other cities such as Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. To do this there will be a permanent chorus in each city where a company is maintained.

The original revival season was undertaken as an experiment, but the operas proved successful from the beginning. Other cities displayed so much interest in the plan that many of the companies, upon concluding their engagement at Jolson's Theater, were sent on tour.

While the operas for the new season have been selected, at least for the first four presentations, no announcement was made as to their titles further than that there will be several by Victor Herbert. Some of the older masters, too, will be presented in the schedule. Each opera will be sung for two weeks at prices no higher than $2 for the best orchestra seats.

Gala "Night Before" Program at Nantasket

Paragon Park at Nantasket Beach will be open all night tomorrow. A "night before" display of fireworks will be set off at 1 A. M. Saturday when patrons will see the biggest show of noise makers ever seen at this Park. Special vaudeville acts have been engaged. The new roller skating rink will have its first midnight exhibition of fancy skating. Free outdoor dancing in the new Pavilion within the Park will be available to patrons of the Park together with keys for the clock in the Park contest.

Exeter Theater

Tallulah Bankhead in "Tarnished Lady," and Stuart Erwin in "Dude Ranch," also Burton Holmes travel in "Peeps at Peking," are the attractions for the remainder of the week at the Exeter.

Gayety Theater

E. M. Loew, owner of the Gayety, will present Charles Chaplin in "City Lights" together with another big feature beginning Sunday.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The first autogyro flight ever made over Niagara Falls is shown in the issue of Hearst Metrotone News to be shown at Loew's Orpheum tomorrow, and thrillingly described by the Globe Trotter, who accompanied the autogyro in another plane on its dangerous journey. The flying windmill takes desperate chances skimming the whirling rapids and actually invading the gorge to within a few feet of the mighty cataract itself.

From Paris comes striking pictures of the Steeplechase de Paris, which turf classic opens "Grand Week" at Auteuil. This Steeplechase is important because it gives the first glimpses of the new fashions as displayed by mannequins at the track. The Globe Trotter describes some of them and tells the feminine listeners among other interesting information, that ostrich feathers are coming back into style.

Mrs. Harold Gatty gives the Globe Trotter an interesting interview at her home in Los Angeles. Her children display great interest in their daddy's great adventure, Queen Wilhelmina, of Holland, is probably the least publicised of all Europe's royalty, and her only child, Princess Juliana, the heir apparent, is even less so. The French Colonial Exposition in Paris, however, was the big magnet that drew them to Paris.

Uncle Sam's anti-aircraft guns at Fort Sheridan, Ill., give a remarkable display of night firing. An unusual picture shows the natives of Orvieto, near Rome, Italy, paving an entire street with gorgeous flowers.

Jim Jeffries, once of the champion pugilist of the world, comes into the limelight once again by inviting cameramen to make a picture of a rodeo at his great ranch at Burbank, Calif.

Mrs. William Randolph Hearst chairman of New York's Milk Fund receives a remarkable tribute from the city at a municipal celebration held in honor of the tenth anniversary of this splendid charity, which has done so much to save the lives of children in New York. Mayor Walker, in complimenting Mrs. Hearst, links her name with that of the late Nathan Straus as being among the greatest benefactors of mankind. Mrs. Hearst expressed her thanks to the mayor and to the hundreds of children who were present, for their gratitude.

BOSTON OFFICE OPENED TODAY BY N. G. I.

With the formal opening today of a modern office in the Statler Building, officials of the N. G. I. believe that they are offering to Bostonians and their New England patrons greatly improved facilities for service. The new office at 14 Providence st. offers the advantages of central location, easy access to parking facilities, convenience to transit lines and comfortable roomy quarters.

The opening was featured by a window exhibition of a 15-foot model of the S. S. Rona, which is a highly detailed miniature of the modern ocean liner

An entrance to the new office opening on the arcade of the Statler Building makes it convenient for the company's patrons in the building. Company officials from New York city and the manager of the office were hosts at a luncheon to newspapermen.

During the coming year the new S. S. Rex will make her maiden voyage to America. The super liner will be the last word in ocean travel and luxury.

A new idea about time has been evolved by contemporary scientists who say that time can be bent like a lead pipe. Just how much there is to this new conception of time is explained in article in the American Weekly section of the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

'HAVE PATIENCE IN LOVE,' MISS FAIRFAX ADVISES

Marry-Go-Round

LOVE IS STRANGE STATE OF MENTAL ABERRATION

By HELEN ROWLAND

LOVE IS that strange state of aberration which makes a fine, intelligent man think that some cute little dumb-bell half his weight and age is going to be his mental mate and soul-companion for life.

* * *

Marriage is like the morning newspaper. Everybody who's through with it tells you that there's "nothing in it"; but, somehow, that doesn't prevent you from wanting to find out for yourself.

* * *

HELEN ROWLAND.

Many a man who takes a secret pride in his wife seems to be afraid to ask anything flattering to her for fear she might respond!

* * *

There is a time and a place for everything; even a beautiful, fascinating woman is just a nuisance on a fishing-trip. And a kiss is just an interruption when you are trying to win your point in argument with a man.

* * *

It is hard for a woman to listen to a man when he is criticizing her faults, but even that is easier than trying to look sweet and pleasant when he is enthusiastically praising some other woman's charms.

* * *

Whenever you see a woman perking up, buying a lot of new hats, taking a new interest in the shape of her hair and going around with a new light in her eyes, you may know that she has either just found a new love-affair or just recovered from an old one.

* * *

Why is it that when a man gets a successful, money-making wife, his one bright idea so often seems to be to kill the goose that lays the golden egg, either by worrying her to death with his jealousy or by filling her with an inferiority complex by flirting with other women?

* * *

Many a girl has mistaken her love of a stunning sport car for love of the man who owned it.

* * *

The honeymoon is over when she can hear his key in the latch without glancing in the mirror or running to powder her nose.

Maybe 'Boy Friend' Is Bashful

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been chumming with a girl and am very much in love with her brother. Her people tell me that, if I am not at their house when he returns from work, he asks questions as to my whereabouts. But when I am there, he acts indifferent toward me. How can I find out whether he has any affection for me?

G. C. L.

Dear G. C. L.: You must be very patient with this boy who is probably shy. If there is anything in the theory of propinquity, you have a very good chance of winning his friendship. You are on friendly terms with the members of his family. Be natural and friendly when you meet him, but do not appear too interested in him.

She Cannot Decide

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 23 years old and have been going steady with a boy a little younger than myself. He is serious, quiet, while I am full of fun. He is all for one girl, doesn't approve of me going out with anyone else. Of course, we often talk of when we'll get married.

Well, lately, I've met someone whom I think I like a lot. He wants me to go steady with him. He knows about the other young man. Could you please, Miss Fairfax, advise me what to do? My steady is so good to me, I'd hate to hurt him, and yet I'd like to try the other fellow. The chances are I may give up a good fellow for one who is not worth it.

"SHORTY."

Dear Shorty: Your's is the classic dilemma. Aesop has something to say for it in his fable of the dog with the bone, who dropped the reality for the reflection of himself and the bone he saw when looking from a bridge into the water. The main thing for you is to make up your mind which man you like best. Why don't you be perfectly plain with your "steady," say that you are not ready to get married yet, that you would like to go around with some others first? If you don't want to take that chance, I would advise you to forget the other fellow.

By DR. COPELAND.

PRIMITIVE man believed his courage would be made greater by eating the heart of his enemy.

Today modern medicine advocates the internal use of certain glandular extracts. In fact, some of the authorities claim that certain glands are capable of controlling age and that other processes of rejuvenation. The hopeful scientists think it may become possible to prevent the uncomfortable physical changes of advancing life from taking place.

Dr. Copeland

These chemical substances produced by the glands of the human body, are spoken of as "internal secretions" or "hormones." From these organs they are carried by the blood to other parts of the body and they are used as needed.

These substances have been definitely isolated. They are known to be secreted from certain glands with big names, notably the pineal, pituitary, thyroid, parathyroid, thymus and adrenal glands. In addition, it is known that the pancreas, stomach, upper intestines and other glands secrete similar substances, likewise known as hormones.

In some diseases, there is a deficiency in the secretion of one or more of the hormones. When this happens, there is trouble.

For instance, when the thyroid gland fails to supply the normal amount of its internal secretion we have an uncomfortable physical condition, spoken of as "myxedema." It is startling to observe the favorable effect of giving an extract of thyroid gland in this disease

Announcement of the Secret Wedding

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

A young couple have been married secretly for five months and now they wish to announce it to their friends and acquaintances. How shall they do it?

Would it be proper to have a reception at this late date?

READER

Under these circumstances I always suggest that the announcement be made as inconspicuous as possible. That is, that the couple tell their closest relatives and friends, and write to the others. No reception, no party-occasion to make the announcement more "dramatic." After they have become settled in their new home, then they might well have their friends to dine with them, and later have larger parties. But this by way of hospitality, not by way of "announcing" their marriage.

Just Isn't Done Nowadays

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Is it correct for a lady to take her partner's arm when leaving the floor after a dance?

2. Should she offer his arm to his partner?

W. E. and D. F.

1. No, this isn't "done" nowadays.

2. No, this isn't "done" either.

Bluebirds---Not Blue Eyes Called Wanderer Back

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE TALL American is going home.

He's been abroad for three years, and he's tried to go home half a dozen times, but business was never right at exactly the right time.

But now he's going, whether business is right or wrong.

He can't stand it a week longer.

"You'll laugh when you hear what I'm homesick for," said the tall American.

Winifred Black

"A stack of wheats" inquired the other American.

"A certain pair of blue eyes?" queried the other American's wife, putting her head sentimentally on one side.

The tall American laughed.

"Nope," he said. "I wouldn't object to a stack of wheats, and a cup of honest-to-goodness coffee, but the pair of eyes I'd like to see are not blue—they're brown—but they don't want to see me, so that's that.

"My mother's gone now, and so has my father, my only brother went out West ten years ago and he isn't much of a hand at letter-writing, so I don't know much about him.

"No, it isn't folks I'm homesick for; I'm homesick for a bluebird's nest in a gnarled old apple tree I know, way down in New England.

"Those trees in bloom here, and up and down the hillsides have got me—I can't stand it any longer.

"I've got to see if old Uncle Hiram and Aunt Hetty have sent their children back to build their nest in the old apple tree down in the orchard near the well. On hot Summer days we used to water the horses there when they came in from the fields, and you could smell the hay drying in the meadow, and hear a dog barking way off yonder somewhere, and wonder who was coming down the road on the other side of the valley.

"They always came every year Hiram and Hetty, we called them then.

"Hiram was a spruce young rascal with shocking tic of his head and Hetty was as blue as a bunch of blue flax all in bloom along the road about June, or the early part of July.

"Great love-makers they were. They'd twitter and talk just at daybreak and just at sundown and Hetty knew more about building a nest than any bird in the orchard.

"And every year they'd raise their family, and off they'd go when the leaves began to flutter down yellow and brown in that kind of a hush that comes when most of the summer work is done.

"Let's see, that's 20 years ago—I heard a bluebird yelling from the top of a German apple tree this morning, and he said, 'Say, here's a good place, come on, let's start building.'

"And something kind of choked me and I went right down to the village and sent a telegram and tomorrow I'm going home.

"I want to see what kind of a wife Hiram a grandson has picked for himself.

"Maybe it is the smell of the apple blossoms—maybe it's just because it is summer—anyway, I'm going home."

I do hope the grandchildren will be there when the tall American gets back home—don't you?

Gold Braid on Novel Sandals

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, July 2—A carefully selected group of accessories can do much to make a sartorial success, even when the number of one's frocks is of necessity restricted.

A couple of frocks with the right accessories will carry one through a season and are to it that one's reputation for being well and appropriately dressed does not in the least suffer. This year has demonstrated that it isn't the amount that is spent on clothes that is of the greatest importance, it is how one's money is expended that really counts.

Many women have a wardrobe full of clothes and never have the right accessories to go with more than one frock. But a judicious choice will permit one to wear shoes, hankie and bag with different frocks and still these accessories will be the perfect complement to each costume.

The idea of a set of accessories sacred to each frock has ceased to be, but this needn't worry anybody who can choose accessories without running wild.

* * *

Pictured is a group of very new accessories. The sandals are by Julienne and the hankie is by Lanvin. The strapped sandal is for tennis and Madame Julienne has made it in bright yellow antelope strapped with white kid and with a sole of crepe rubber.

For more formal wear is the lovely sandal of gold braid, fastening with a jewel at the base of the instep, and with a heel of carved wood, gilded. Such a sandal can be worn with many different frocks with huge success.

The handkerchief is of light green chiffon with a border and appliqued letters of the same chiffon. The letters form the disconcerting injunction, "Prenez Garde," a rather subtle if a rather open way of telling a certain somebody to be on guard.

2½ tbsps. flour
1½ tsps salt
1 tsp. mustard
2 tbsps. salad oil
⅛ tsp. pepper
½ cupful lemon juice
1 cupful boiling water
2 egg yolks
½ cupful salad oil

Mix together until smooth the flour, salt, mustard, pepper, and two tbsps. of salad oil. Add the lemon juice and boiling water, cook in the top of a double-boiler until well thickened. Cool, add the egg yolks well beaten and beat in the oil, adding it very gradually at first. When all the oil is added, the dressing should be stiff like mayonnaise. This is excellent as a dressing for vegetable or fish salads.

'GOOD LUCK' DESSERTS OF LEMON

By MARTHA LEE

MOST EVERY pantry boasts a package or two of ready-prepared lemon pie filling, and we're grateful that it's so quick and easy to prepare a delicious pie with little time and effort and a full measure of good luck. But do you know that there are many other delicious desserts that can be made with this same lemon pie filling?

Martha Lee

Perhaps you've a little stale cake which can be quickly steamed in a wire sieve over a little hot water and served with a lemon pudding sauce. To make this, put the contents of one of the lemon pie filling packages into a double boiler, adding two or three level tbsps. of sugar, according to your taste. Stir in slowly one half cup of cold water, then the beaten yolks of two eggs and four cups of boiling water. Cook in the double boiler for about 10 minutes, and pour over cake, rice or cornstarch pudding.

Lemon cream glace is made in the double boiler too, mixing one package of the lemon pie with one-half cup of sugar, one-half cup of cold water and the beaten yolks of 2 eggs. Add one and three-fourths cups of boiling water and stir constantly until thick, (about 10 minutes). Then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs, and spread while hot over small pieces of sponge or plain butter cakes, or large lady fingers. Sprinkle with chopped nuts and serve two pieces to each.

Yours faithfully,

Martha Lee

Don't Play Ponies, Play the Hunches. Here's Sure Proof. ↕ Signs Showed Ma My Cornwall Boy Simply Must Win.

Anyway, Bookies, We Didn't Have to Walk!

We're back broke from Salem! Back home with bankroll blown! We're back broke from Salem—but we're not goin' to moan. Ha! Ha! We fooled the bookies! Showed 'em on their dome! With gas galore in Lizzie, we rode, not walked, back home!

Now if we hadn't known so much about hosses, hadn't rubbed elbows with jockeys, trainers, owners, wise guys, hadn't been so all-fired smart and hadn't turned a deaf ear to Ma's hunches, we would have come back from Rockingham with a bank roll. But all dressed up in a pair of ice cream pants, with field glasses strung around our neck and our brand-new Rangoon, which we paid all of 3 dollars for tilted at a sporty angle over our left ear, we imagined ourselves the last word in racing. We'll listen to Ma the next time. As we put our left hand down in the left-hand corner of the left pocket of our ice cream pants to see if that thin dime to carry us home from the office is still there, we raise our right hand and solemnly aver we'll listen to Ma next time.

First race. Weather clear. Track fast. Start AWFUL—for us. You see we had a red-hot tip, straight from the feed box. Smouldering. Handsome bay gelding, 6-year-old, by Campfire out of Bandana III. Yes, we have no bananas! No simoleons, too. Thanks to that son of Bandana III. Wise Guy I got us off in the corner and whispered "Smouldering." Wise Guy II gave us the eye. When we sidled around the corner he whispered "Smouldering." Wise Guy III waggled three fingers and jerked his thumb as the high sign and strolled toward the paddock. When we were 100 feet out of earshot of everybody he leaned over and scribbled on the dirt "Smouldering."

We could stand it no longer. With an anguished wail we raced to the betting booth and bought all of two dollars' worth of "Smouldering."

"Who did you bet on?" queried Ma when we took our seat beside her. We leaned over and whispered, "F-h-h-h-h! Smouldering! Got the tip right from the feed box! He'll win in a walk!"

"You mean he'll win if only the other hosses walk, you Sap," snapped Ma. "Why, you boob, how can you overlook My Cornwall Boy! Can't you see the jockey's silks are Red, White and Blue? Don't you hear the band playing "The Star-Spangled Banner"? Don't you know Saturday is Fourth of July? Why, you Sap, it is as plain as that big nose on your homely face that the stage is set for My Cornwall Boy! Here take this 50 cents and get back some of that dough you are losing for me!

What happened? Why Ma's hunch won of course. Jockey Stout booted My Cornwall Boy home to the tune of $24 to $2. My Cornwall Boy came down the stretch like a house afire. Smouldering was only smouldering.

Red, White and Blue atop him, band playing national air. Wasn't Ma's hunch a pippin, tip from the angels for fair? Oh if Ma only had told us—alas, also slack! Gallagher, owner of Cornwall, also owns the track!

It was a great day for Bill Gallagher, anyway. Big crowd, red hot racing, plenty of betting and his own skate bringing home the bacon at $24 to $2. No wonder they call him "Lucky Bill."

Ma put another one over on us in the second race. We played another feed box tip, Zaidee, beautiful daughter of the great Zev out of Decree. Ma selected Billy Blake. And Billy won of course.

"Why'd ja pick him, Ma?" we queried. "Because he is trained by Leo Feustel, who trained the great Man o' War?"

"Not because Feustel trained Man o' War," answered Ma. "But because Feustel, next to you, is the homeliest man at this track. I knew God would be good to him some way!"

Now will you be good, Leo!

Here's a Lucky Pastime

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

America is becoming "horse shoe" conscious, according to the papers.

More persons are playing "horseshoes," as we used to call it in barefoot days, or "barnyard golf," as it is known in districts where Democrats vote the Republican ticket, than ever before.

The game brings good luck to the players. If they fail to get hit with a horse shoe, they are luckier than they would be if they did.

Which, of course, is something.

We were once hit by a horse shoe, with the horse still attached. That's why we write this column.

Get away from that horse's head!

Manero Breaks Par to Take Early Lead

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN.

Inverness Country Club, Toledo, O., July 2—Tony Manero, tall, slim pro of Elmsford, N. Y., sprang into the lead in the 1931 national open golf championship today when he negotiated the first nine holes in a brilliant 34, a stroke under par. He was the first of the early starters to break par.

Manero did not seem to be at all affected by the [illegible] which he faced the [illegible] and in all [illegible] home of the players [illegible] ...ole and continued [illegible] ...ment today.

The biggest gallery of all 1500 persons at least, followed Tommy Armour of Detroit and Henry Cotton of England when they started away later in the forenoon. Armour, winner of the British open and the Canadian open championship, was the general favorite to win the tournament.

Great Scot Wins Royston Handicap

Newmarket, Eng., July 2 (AP)—Mrs. Chester Beatty's Grand National entry, Great Scot, today won the Royston handicap at one mile from Edward Esmonde's Woodcock. A. B. Macomber's Swing Low was third.

Great Scot, an outsider, paid 7 to 1.

A dead heat resulted in the $13,000 Princess of Wales stakes, J. A. Dewar's The Recorder and W. M. Cazalet's Shell Transport finishing the mile and a half journey so closely together the judges could not pick the winner. The Aga Khan's Pomme d'Api was third.

Priscilla III Wins Eight-Meter Race

Gourock, Scotland, July 2 (AP)—Longstaff de Forrest's American yacht the Priscilla III outraced a field of six starters in the eight metre event on the Clyde today.

BAER, UZCUDUN SET FOR FIGHT

Reno, Nev., July 2 (AP)—On the outskirts of Reno today Paulino Uzcudun and Max Baer reached the last stages of training for their 20-round, July 4 heavy weight battle, while in the city Jack Dempsey, former champion, watched the cash boxes take on the appearance that goes with a financially successful promotion.

Ticket selling continued fast with $45,000 on hand according to Promoter Dempsey, and several thousand dollars more in the branch offices. This amount, coupled with the expected spot sales, leads Dempsey to believe the total gate will reach $70,000 or better.

Dempsey says he hopes to match the winner of this fight with one of the country's outstanding ring men, and has mentioned Max Schmeling, Jack Sharkey, Young Stribling and Primo Carnera as would be a Labor Day battle.

FINE RACES CARDED TODAY AT ROCKINGHAM

ROYAL TREE LOOKS GOOD IN 6TH

By HENRY DISKEN

Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., July 2—Seven races are carded today for the second day of the Mid-day race meet here and another banner crowd is expected.

Close to 15,000 race fans flocked to the park yesterday to see the big New England meet in a quarter of a century, and all things point to a huge success.

In the sixth race today, which promises to be the feature, Royal Tree seems to be the best of the lot. Royal Tree will have stiff opposition but the wise money indicates that Royal Tree is the class of the field.

In the opening race Running Jay has a good as they come and should romp home in first place.

In the second race the picking is more difficult, three entries each have run pretty nearly neck to neck. Parabona has the call.

Pomfret, who failed to run on the opening day, looks like a pretty good bet in the third race.

The fourth race is a toss-up with Foreheart stepping out like a seasoned veteran. The fifth race has a crowd ready to break from the barrier, and it would not surprise if The Whip frolicked home in the end.

In the seventh race, take your luck. Shasta Charmer is our choice.

Turf Notes

John A. Watson, former Harvard oarsman, Back Bay social registerite, one of the Hub's most eligible bachelors, is a conspicuous figure in the clubhouse enclosure daily, since the nags began to prance.

Bayard Tuckerman, he who has played "Mine Host" to Eddie from Wales, when the Galloping Prince visited the North Shore, several years ago, is another lover of horse flesh who is numbered among those present each day.

This[—]chisler—canoes or ordnance, save the expression, don't journey this way with the hope of getting a day's pay. With your old race track enemy, Captain Daniel Fox of the "Pinks" on the job, there is little chance of getting even in this part of the country. "Big Dan" has already treated the crowd to a "Bum's Rush" scene after he spotted X a well known "stall" walking on the green.

There will be little discomfort to the patrons, from the members of the underworld, if the combined efforts of the promoters, Salem, N. H.; Haverhill, Mass.; Lawrence Mass., and Methuen police can help it. Chief of Police Walter Daig of Salem, N. H., has here as his assistants Capt. Joseph Ryan of Haverhill, Capt. Michael Barry of Lawrence, Chief Frank Seifert of Methuen and 50 men from the three above named places.

William J. McDonald, the man whose keen foresight resulted in the building up of the Park as a district, himself an able trotting driver, is another daily attendant. The well-known realtor spends the afternoon watching the "sport of their business" and so far has not been seen tossing shekels at the machine.

Prof. Joseph Russo, scissors and curling iron man, the Bostonian who played a leading roll in making the bobbed head popular—with bank roll clasped in fist, goes through more gymnastics while the ponies are coming down the "Home Stretch" than he would if he were giving Mary Pickford a permanent.

Judge William Day with his family occupy a box in the grand stand.

Frank Ducey, golden voice announcer from the Hub, found his place with the rest of the rail birds. Frank was paired up with Eddie Mack, boxing impresario and the man who first gave $0 rounds for 50 cents.

Boxes in the grandstand set aside for Mayor James M. Curley, U. S. Senator George H. Moses and Governor John Winant were occupied by members of their official families. The politicians failed to put in an appearance.

U. S. Asst. Dist. Atty. Hubert Thompson managed to forget his legal duties and wander this way.

Frank Kane, well known Hub sportsman jumped with glee when Spanish Jack romped home a winner. Several boys in the press box slumped into a slough of despair.

Dr. Frank F. Collins, for many years attached to the medical office of the Boston Police Department joined the rail birds just before the fourth race.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

THEY'RE OFF! EVER SEE 'EM BREAK FROM BARRIER?

If you've never seen a field of thoroughbreds as the webbing goes up, here it is. Gus Williams, Boston American sharpshooter, snapped this start as the field broke from the barrier in the seventh race at Rockingham yesterday. Flying Winds, who won, is sixth from the rail. Pocketed at the start, Flying Winds corkscrewed his way through the field and came home with the bells on. But this is how the giddyaps act when the starting barrier is raised and the crowd in the grandstand roars, "They're off!"

Stribling's Stunts Fail to Impress Max

By BILL CORUM

Conneaut Lake Park, Pa., July 2—We arrived in this jolly little Pennsylvania pleasure resort, where an undertaker's convention is Exhibit A, in time to see Willie ("Wings") Stribling doing the "falling leaf" in a red airplane over the ring where Max Schmeling was training for their 15-round fight in Cleveland Friday night.

That's Stribling in that ship, somebody told Max, though nobody here really believed it at the time.

Yah, said the punch Germun, and went on about his business of perfecting a left hook.

Tunney flew calmly to two of his major fights. But he did not pilot the ship and he did not permit it to do fancinnan's and dead wing falls while he shouted salutes and the courtesies of the day to his intended rival.

It was the beau geste all right, and it had just that touch of Southern audacity and courtesy you would expect from Willie of the old South.

But Max himself probably threw a truer light on the exploit when he told the writer later. "I think maybe he worries some, yes? I think not know exactly what to do with himself."

If the state of a fighter's nerves and mind was the only yardstick with which to gauge in advance the outcome of a fight, then you would have to choose Schmeling first, last and all the time.

I think he sleeps better these hot nights than his handsome chaperon from below the Mason-Dixon line.

Max Certain That He Will Drub Strib

In his calm, careful, well-balanced mind there isn't the slightest shadow of doubt that he can lick any man in the world. He is, Mr. Stribling might as well know now as later, going to take plenty of beating.

Schmeling and Max Machon, his trainer, both assure me that the "black bomber" is in better physical trim now than he was a year ago. I believe them. And Max's looks are a further convincer. No pugilist at any weight, in the eye of any fight, ever looked more hale and hearty than the Herr looks right now.

Just before he came to this country for the Sharkey match he suffered an attack of the grippe or something as he called it. He went almost directly from the boat into training at Endicott, N. Y., and never, so he says, and it is easy to believe if ever you have experienced an attack of the flu, felt really himself for weeks.

Since that time he has not had so much as a scratched finger and it he can preserve the record for three more days he will enter the ring in defense of his sitting-down title an absolutely fit athlete.

A young lady approached William McCarney on the street here the other morning and asked how for a dollar with which to go horseback riding.

"I thought I had been touched for douch for every known purpose," mused the old prof later, "but that's the first time I ever sent a young lady riding in the park on a horse. Times surely do change, eh?"

And, folks, is it not! These stories are written in a room that probably is used for a Turkish bath after midnight. Try that on your typewriter some time.

HARVARD LOSES BY 4 LENGTHS

Henley-on-Thames, England, July 2 (AP)—Buffeted by a vicious cross wind and towed under their seats by a sturdier and more precise crew Harvard University's oarsmen were defeated by the London Rowing Club today by four lengths in 7 minutes, 49 seconds.

Harvard blew their all in the initial stages of the mile and 550 yards, but it wasn't enough. London, picking up inch by inch after the first quarter-mile during which Harvard battled the Londoners on even terms.

At the half-mile much daylight separated the boats. Then Harvard whipped her strokes to a burst of 35 in a heart-breaking effort to catch the speeding Londoners.

The 36 pace was too high for the Americans, who dropped to 29 for the next half-mile. London led by three lengths at the three-quarter post.

The game, but vain fight of the Crimson eight drew cheers from crowds gathered on both sides of the course.

After the race, Coach Terry said: "The boys gave all they had, but they were up against a better crew."

The Tabor, Mass., Academy crew, rowing in the Thames challenge cup, also was defeated by 5 lengths by the second crew of the London Rowing Club, leaving no American entrant in the regatta.

Diffey played under Earle Neale now mountaineer head football coach, at Virginia. He will assist C. C. Tallman, head freshman mentor.

RUNYON PICKS SCHMELING TO WIN

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

New York, July 2—Of course, I think Herr Max Schmeling, the Black Uhlan of the Rhine, will lick Willie Stribling, of Georgia, at Cleveland tomorrow night like breaking sticks.

Indeed, Herr Max may stop William.

It is my belief that the pugilistic leopard does not change its spots.

Ten years of wrestling and holding have made Stribling a confirmed addict to that style. Ten years of caution have made him very cautious, indeed.

I see no reason to think that over night he is going to alter his habits. If he does, I will be the first to apologize and beg his forgiveness.

If George Blake, the California referee, gets Stribling to stop clutching and fight, I doubt that the thing will go far," Blake, by the way, has refereed for Stribling before, lifting the Georgian's hand, and justly, over Sailor Eddie Huffman out in California some years ago.

Blake is an honest and capable referee, one of the best in the country today, but even honest and capable referees sometimes have a conception of boxing that bodes ill for a certain type of fighter.

If Blake's conception of the manly art happens to be that Stribling's holding is "tying up" his opponent, and pure science, that will be bad for Schmeling, who has to do his fighting at long range. The German isn't so hot inside.

"Strib's" K. O. Record Doesn't Mean a Thing

Stribling isn't a deadly puncher. His amazing record of knockouts doesn't mean a thing, as most of the men he knocked out were mere galoots. His last fight was with Tuffy Griffith, of Chicago, who had been flattened by James J. Braddock and Jack Gagnon, and Stribling couldn't dent Tuffy's chin.

He is undoubtedly a great defensive boxer. His ought to know how to be, after ten years of it.

Schmeling can't box a lick, but he is a good puncher. Moreover, he can take a punch. Sharkey hit him with everything but the spectators, and Max was still shuffling in when the Sharkey man dropped that low down punch.

I expect to see the Black Uhlan take another shellacking in the early rounds of his fight with Stribling. The pride of Georgia will peck at him like a woodpecker sampling a new tree, but the instant William is nailed he will not be so brash.

HELEN JACOBS IS BEATEN AT WIMBLEDON

Wimbledon Stadium, Eng., July 2 (AP)—Helen Jacobs, last American in the women's singles of the Wimbledon championship, was eliminated today in the semi-final round by Hilda Krahwinkel, Germany's third ranking woman player, making it an all-German final. The scores were 10—8, 6—8, 6—4.

Miss Krahwinkel will play her countrywoman, Cilla Aussem, in the finals Saturday while Frank X. Shields and Sidney B. Wood, Jr., the American youngsters are battling for the crown in men's singles.

Miss Jacobs, after her surprising victory over Betty Nuthall of England, in the quarter-finals, had been favored to defeat the little German player and meet Miss Aussem, Germany's ranking star, in the finals.

LARIVEE AND NICHOLS TO TRAIN HERE

By JACK CONWAY

Leo Larivee, Waterbury lightheavyweight, and George Nichols of Buffalo were to arrive here today to complete training for their 10-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at Braves Field next Monday night.

This is in line with the new policy of Eddie Mack's which requires all main bout performers to be on the scene of the contest at least four days before a show. He is anxious to guard against [illegible] occurred when Primo Carnera failed to appear at the Wigwam for an exhibition.

Jack Conway

It was revealed today that Larivee and Nichols have agreed to make 163 pounds for the contest. Larivee believes that will give him the advantage, as Nichols usually battles around 170 pounds. George will have to pull off a few pounds, and Larivee says the will take some of the dynamite out of his rival's punch.

Larivee and Nichols have both displayed a knockout wallop in their Boston matches. It is expected they will furnish plenty of thrills when they whirl into action Monday night.

Maloney to Remain at, Training Camp Here

Jim Maloney has changed his plans and will not go to Cleveland to see the Schmeling-Stribling show. Shamus had his bags packed and planned to accompany Dan Carroll and Napoleon Jack Dorval to Cleveland. Dorval was obliged to withdraw from his engagement on the Max-Strib card and so Maloney and Carroll decided to remain here.

Maloney has been training for two weeks and is already in splendid condition. The South Boston warrior isn't offering any alibi for his recent setback at the hands of Schaaf, but is confident such a happening won't occur again.

Maloney has always been most dangerous following a crushing defeat. He has made more comebacks than anybody in the boxing game.

KEEP LOCAL CLUB OUT OF 1ST DIVISION

By JOE CASHMAN

Our Braves have yet to discover how to hold their own against lowly rivals.

They can consistently whip the Cardinals, Cubs and Robins, all first-division clubs, but the Pirates, Phils and Reds, the last three teams in the standing, are continually tripping them up.

The Warriors promised to overcome this weakness in the current series with the Bucs, but already they have dropped two out of three to the seventh-place visitors from Pittsburgh.

For despite taking six out of 10 from the Cards and Cubs, they are still one down to the Westerns, due to dropping five out of seven to the Reds and Pirates.

Tribe Must Learn How to Beat Lowly Clubs

The chances of the Tribe finishing at or near the top in the National League race this season depend almost entirely on how soon and well it solves the riddle of how to whip weak opposition.

There is no limit to the heights the natives may attain if they can manage before long to enjoy as much success against the clubs beneath them as they do against the clubs above them.

On the other hand, they are bound to have their troubles keeping within hailing distance of the first division, if they don't quickly erase their losing ground while playing the weaklings of the circuit.

The Pirates before coming here on Monday couldn't beat any body and were rushing headlong towards the cellar. It didn't seem possible that they could cause much trouble for the Braves, who had just taken three out of four from the Cubs, yet they decisively outplayed the locals in two of the first three games.

Both great pitchers as Rhem, Derringer and Lindsay of the Cards, and Malone, Root and Smith of the Cubs, couldn't halt he Tribesmen, but a young Pirate named Glen Spencer beat them 4 to 1 and deserved no blame then, as the third game of the present engagement at the Terps

With apparently very little but a fine fast ball, Spencer gave only five hits and permitted only two Warriors to reach third base until the ninth inning, when he was found for two more hits and an unearned run.

As far as hits are concerned "Socks" Seibold, who hurled eight innings for the Braves, outpitched his rival as he gave one less, but he had a few fatal wild spells and wasn't very effective in the pinches

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER NORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

It is a common practice to reach for the ball in the address. This is bad golfing practice. The address should find you so standing that the end of the club it would just graze your left knee if you lowered the club toward the ground. If you reach for the ball you may have the feeling that you will swing more freely, having more room for your arms to get through. At the same time, the very freedom you secure will be destroyed through lack of balance. Your center of balance, because of the reaching, will be forward, with your weight more to your toes.

Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Out on the links of the Inverness Country Club in Toledo, more than 150 of the world's leading golfers started this morning to battle for the crown which Bobby Jones allowed to go by default.

Due to the recent hot spell which has swept over the Middle West, Inverness is baked to a crisp and this condition will benefit the field.

Although only a few of the contestants have risked sunstroke by playing Inverness this week, there have been some low rounds recorded. Such is always the case before a championship but most of the pre-championship low scorers fail to produce when they are handed a card and pencil.

Henry Cotton, the talented English professional is the one invader who will receive plenty of sidesplitting. Cotton is cocky to say the least and he is firmly convinced that he will lift the title. And also that he will reap the harvest through exhibition matches in this country before he returns home.

Dave Hackney, Vesper, and Joe Pezzullo, Wannamotonomy, a former Rhode Island caddy, junior and amateur champion, carry the best wishes of New England. Pezzullo is making his first start in a national championship today. He had fine possibilities and in fast company he is always at his best.

The Walpole Country Club open will wind up its third and final day this evening. Although most of the Greater Boston golfers have been in action at Walpole during the past two days, the scores, both gross and net, are not as low as expected.

Many of the local golfers are tuning up their games at the Famous Golf Ground at Weymouth, where it is possible to practice every shot in the bag

Failure on the part of the handicap committees to watch closely the improvement of their members is ruining club tournaments. There are altogether too many players with from 25 to 30 handicaps showing in the 80's to keep up interest in club events.

According to John Ford, the Blue Hill Country Club will open two more holes on the holiday. The new holes will eventually be the 17th and 18th and they are exceptionally fine ones.

The automatic tees at Jack Dondero's driving range have made a tremendous hit. Trying to drive balls in hard clay tees has been a drawback to driving ranges and Dorchedon has negotiated this barrier with his automatics.

Lively Skirmishes Behind the Lines

Microphone Chieftains Raid Rival Ranks Seeking Stars

Here in our United States there are two major combines operating networks of radio stations from coast to coast. Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Company—that's them. Each has grown so fast that they haven't had time to even feel their growing pains.

At the head of these competing chains will be found two vigorous men who exemplify American energy in a manner that is most forcibly reflected in the seven league strides made by broadcasting on these shores. NBC and CBS have certainly had things their own way, excepting for the ingenuity and resourcefulness of each.

In typical Yankee fashion, these opposing organizations have been virtually at each others' throats in a concentrated and determined effort to hold the center of the ethereal stage. Close observation of the struggle for supremacy between the two, reveals a business and professional rivalry, the keenness of which is only exceeded by what may be truthfully termed professional ethics governing their "air raids," one against the other.

* * *

Hold That Line-Up!

Radio stars, whose air performances have made their names household words over the land, transfer their allegiance from one network to the opposing chain with increasing regularity. It is surprising that contracts are not made more binding. Perhaps it is because microphone entertainment is so young as a business that the fine points of contractual manipulation have probably not yet been thoroughly mastered. Such is hardly possible, however, since Merlin (NBC) Aylesworth and William (CBS) Paley were both business moguls of no mean ability in the days when present-day radio development was undreamed of.

Long-term agreements with artists may be regarded by them as risky, in view of the pronounced demand for new personalities on the part of listeners. Whatever the reason, microphone celebrities continue to change over.

Lee Morse, of the deep, sad voice, is the latest to pop forward with an announcement that she has forsaken CBS in favor of NBC. Miss Morse made her initial bow for the latter last night at 7:30 through the network of WEAF. Lee moans low again on Saturday at 7 p. m.

Painful Duty . . . .

Yesterday morning a radio writer featured an item in his column concerning the transatlantic address of Paul Doumer, new President of France. A notice to the effect that Doumer would be heard at 4:30 p. m. yesterday hereby stands corrected. Tomorrow afternoon at that time is the Right information, WAAB is the station locally.

Please don't be provoked. Little slips of the kind are rare in the column referred to. The writer is really a topping fellow, conscientious as he can be and usually very accurate.

GRAND HOTEL

By VICKI BAUM

The Baron Gets the Layout of Grusinskaya's Suit; Locates the Pearls

SYNOPSIS

In the atmosphere peculiar to all great hotels, three guests and several hotel employes are brought briefly to view. These guests include a morose and hideously scarred ex-army surgeon, Herr Doktor Otternschlag, Grusinskaya, once famous but now aging ballet dancer, and Baron Gaigern, ex-soldier, handsome, athletic and mysterious. The hall porter distrusts the Baron. The house detective admits that this likable young man will bear watching. Otto Kringelein, bookkeeper, of Saxony, has just succeeded in getting a room after many rebuffs. His uncouth attire causes smiles in the lounge. Grusinskaya's performance in the ballet is losing favor with the public. She declares her famous pearls are unlucky and does not wear them to the theatrical banquet. While she is there, the Baron gains access to her suite and studies the layout.

WHEN SUZETTE arrived at the door of No. 68, the room occupied by Grusinskaya, she saw a charming young man standing behind a palm. His bashful and ingratiating features seemed not unfamiliar to her.

"Good evening, mademoiselle. Permit me to say one word," he said in his charming and rather old-world French, the French that is taught in a Jesuit seminary. "Only one word. Madame is not in her room."

"I do not know, sir," replied the well-trained Suzette.

"It is only—forgive the presumption—that I should like so much to lay a little flower for madame in her room. I have so great a veneration for madame. I was at the theater tonight. I never miss an evening when madame dances. I have read in the papers, you see, that madame loves these Cattleias—is it true?"

"Yes," said Suzette, "she loves orchids. We have started the cultivation of orchids in our hothouses at Tremezzo."

"Ah! Then may I give you my spray and ask you to leave it in Madame's room?"

She looked at the bashful young man with considerable friendliness. But she could not take the spray because she had both hands full. It was difficult even to get the key into her right hand in order to open the door of No. 68. Gaigern, who saw her embarrassment, went quickly up to her.

"Allow me," he said, and put out his hands to take the two cases. Suzette surrendered the larger one, but she drew back instinctively as she maintained her grasp of the smaller one. So the famous pearls are in that one, Gaigern thought, though he kept his thoughts to himself. He opened the door for her and the inner one as well, and with shy and at the same time enraptured steps crossed the threshold of the room where Grusinskaya slept.

LAYS SUITCASE DOWN

The room had the same banal and tawdry elegance as all the others. The cool air inside smelled of a curious aromatic scent as well as of the bouquets of flowers, and the window on to the small balcony stood open. The bed was turned down, and a pair of little bedroom slippers were by the bed. They were rather trodden down and shabby—the slippers of a woman who is accustomed to sleep by herself.

Gaigern stood in the door, holding out his orchids as though beseeching the acceptance of them. Suzette put down the smaller suitcase on the dressing table between the three mirrors and at last took the flowers.

"Thank you, monsieur," she said, "what name shall I say?"

"What an idea! I am not so presumptuous," said Gaigern. He looked observantly at Suzette's wrinkled face and saw a strange resemblance to the face of her mistress. "You are tired," he said, "and no doubt Madame will be late. Must you wait up for Madame?"

"Oh, no, Madame is good. Madame says every night, 'You can go to bed, Suzette.' But Madame needs me all the same. So I wait up for her. Madame is never later than two o'clock because she has to start work every morning at nine. And how she works, monsieur. Oh, mon Dieu! No, Madame is very good."

"She must be an angel," said Gaigern ecstatically. (So there is only a bathroom without a window between 68 and 69, he thought, as he said it.) His wandering gaze returned to Suzette's cavernous yawn.

"Good night and a thousand thanks, mademoiselle," he said politely, and with a smile disappeared.

Suzette shut both doors behind him and after putting the orchids in a glass of water sank, a little shivering heap, into an armchair—to wait.

EVERYBODY IS OUT

Before one o'clock at night there were very few pairs of shoes to be seen in front of the bedroom doors of the Grand Hotel. Everyone was out and about, eagerly savoring the hectic pleasures of the great city in its blaze of electric light. At the end of each passage on every floor a dead-tired chambermaid yawned in her little office.

The page boys came on night shift at ten, but they too, under their jaunty flat-topped caps, had the feverishly bright eyes of children who ought to have been put to bed long before. The ill-tempered one-armed elevator man was relieved at midnight by another ill-tempered one-armed man. The hall porter Senf, too, was relieved by the night porter at about 11, and went off half dazed to the hospital, in such a state of anxiety that his teeth chattered.

On arriving there he was sent back home by an unamiable night nurse, who told him that it would be twenty-four hours till the baby was born, but this, of course, was his own affair and did not concern the hotel. The hotel, meanwhile, was in all its glory.

Matton's negro-like eyes were smiling as he shaved off slices of cold beef or mixed maraschino in iced fruit salads. The electric fans whirred and spewed out the bad air into the courtyards of the hotel and down below in the servants' quarters the chauffeurs sat and talked scandal about their masters. (They are an irritable lot, these chauffeurs, because they are not allowed to drink.)

HERR KRINGELEIN LANDS

In the lounge, visitors up from the provinces sat in amazement and mild vexation over the Berlin men who wore their hats on the backs of their heads and waved their hands about, and over the Berlin ladies with their painted faces. Rohna, spruce and refreshed by a friction of toilet vinegar, as he crossed the lounge was thinking: It is true that our night-time clientele is not of the first order. But—que voulez vous? nowadays only a vulgar clientele puts money in the till.

Just before one o'clock Herr Kringelein landed in the bar. He was tired and he sank down at a small table and surveyed the world about him with watery eyes. To tell the truth, this Kringelein was utterly tired out, but he had the obstinacy of children on their birthdays—he simply would not go to bed. Moreover, he felt that he was asleep already, for everything entered his brain like a confused and feverish dream and the noise, the perpetual movement, the voices, and the music seemed at one moment quite close and at the next moment very far away and entirely unreal.

The world hummed most strangely about his ears and everything combined to produce in him a mysterious state of intoxication.

Once, when he was ten years old, Kringelein had played truant from school. In a panic at the thought of a dictation lesson, he had gone out into the warm morning mist along the road to Mickenau. Then he had left the road and lain down in the heat of the day and slept with his head on a cushion of clover. Later he had got into a grassy hollow by the river and feasted on the raspberries that grew there in immense profusion. All his life he had never forgotten the buzzing of the great gnats that had feasted on his bare legs and his red juice-stained fingers as he pressed in among thorns and nettles to gather handful after handful of raspberries.

He felt again, here in the bar of Berlin's most expensive hotel the same intoxicated feeling, a sense of exuberant plenty as well as of anxiety and alarm the faint threat haunting the wicked joy of wrongdoing the excitement of an escapade. It all came back to him as he sat there between one and two in the morning. The tinging gnats were there too in a sense. They had taken on the likeness of figures that Kringelein has drawn the brain of a bookkeeper who had kept accounts all his life long and now could not stop.

TOO EXPENSIVE FOR HIM

Caviare, for example, cost nine marks. Caviare was a delusion, Kringelein decided. It tasted like herring and cost nine marks. Kringelein had gone hot and cold under the supercilious gaze of three waiters while he stared at the wagon of hors-d'oeuvres which had come to a stop in front of him. He had had to forego the table d'hote supper—at 22 marks—out of consideration for his ailing stomach. Burgundy was a heavy sour vine that lay in a kind of cradle like a baby. The rich had odd tastes, it seemed. Kringelein was by no means stupid, he was very willing to learn, and it had not taken him long to see that he had been badly brought up and did not know how to make proper use of the array of knives and forks before him.

During the whole evening he could not rid himself of a horrible nervous tremor. Embarrassment over tips and wrong doors and puzzled inquiries kept him in a constant state of painful confusion. But this first evening as a man of wealth had its great moments. The shop windows, for example. In Berlin, the shop windows are lighted up at night and the riches of the world are displayed there. I can buy what I like is a novel and enchanting thought for a man like Kringelein.

Kringelein is dazzled by the Berlin high life, he confides to the doctor. What part is he to play in this international drama? Read tomorrow's installment.

BOSTON RISES AS CENTRE OF TRADING

By FRANK H. MELOON.

Among the changes brought by the first half of 1931 is the rise in relative importance of Boston as a stock trading center. This has been evidenced by the entry of about a dozen New York Exchange houses which have established branches here. The change marks a transfer in trading activity from several other centers. For the country as a whole trading diminished on the New York Stock Exchange during the first half of the year about 32 per cent as compared with the like period of 1930.

* * *

There is a widespread expectation in State St. that the last half of this year will see a considerable pickup in the business secured by brokerage houses. A rising market is the guess offered by the majority of those questioned, but of course no one knows, since much depends upon the course of events yet to take place.

Capt. Eugene E. O'Donnell

* * *

Eastern Steamship Lines, of which Capt. Eugene E. O'Donnell is president, has been active in Boston Stock Exchange trading this week. The stock has been bought on the combination of better summer travel weather and the possibility of a rate increase for the railroads, say State St. brokers. It is explained that Eastern Steamship's earnings have not fallen off this year to the same extent as railroad earnings.

* * *

One writer says:

"Eastern Steamship's rates are more or less based on railroad rates, so that it should benefit sooner or later by a favorable decision on the railroad application for higher rate charges."

Unfortunately, it appears, however, that the railroads have no chance of getting any rate relief until September, late in the season for "Steamer," as State St. calls the greatest of coastwise waterway carriers.

* * *

York Harbor, Me., is one of the old-time summer resorts which in recent years has been adding to its original importance. It comes newly into the limelight with the announcement that a Boston Stock Exchange house is opening summer offices there. Years ago York, founded as the first city in New England by Sir Fernando Georges, boasted a mayor and all the then municipal "fixings," but gave up its city charter after a few years. Its importance as a summer resort came considerably later.

* * *

A couple of decades ago it was a common sight at York to see several private railroad cars on the Boston & Maine sidings, but the automobile changed that. Then some of the big hotels were filled with guests of wealth and prominence, and summer "camps" costing from $125,000 up, unusual generally in those days, were not altogether uncommon at old York. Boston mercantile establishments set up branches at the Harbor and in other sections blazing the way for the stock exchange houses which now usually do a good summer's business there.

* * *

Futility of legislation as a cure-all is well illustrated every year at this time, when firecrackers, etc., banned in Massachusetts, are sold in great quantities along the hundreds of miles of the Commonwealth's borders. Thus the legislation simply has resulted in losing business for Bay State taxpaying dealers, thousands buying outside of Massachusetts. Proof that the legislation has been well designed might be offered if it could be shown that serious firecracker accidents of the Fourth were larger in States not adopting the limit made here.

* * *

The late publisher of a ladies' magazine had claimed for him the credit of bringing safety and sanity into the Fourth. The accident toll however grows year by year. In the old days most of our celebratory explosives came from China. In recent years plants in towns south of Boston have won the bulk of the business.

Orders for Freight Cars Are Increased

Domestic orders for freight cars in June totaled 972, says Railway Age, against 46 in May and 794 in June, 1930. No passenger cars were ordered in any of the three comparative months.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Trading in Wall St. today proceeded most of the session at the slowest pace since the flare-up on the war debt holiday plan started June 20. The market appeared to be marking time, awaiting the outcome of Paris parleying. The close was easy.

Many Traders Off for Long Holiday

Quietness today was partially laid to the fact that a great many traders are already away from the boardrooms, extending the week-end's double holiday.

U. S. Steel Makes High on Movement

U. S. Steel today soon managed to top 104 for the first time this week, leading the upswing that took place in some of the favored industrials, but the rise petered out in the afternoon.

"Pool Support" Favorites Higher

There was good action in some of the "pool support" favorites today, led by J. I. Case, which was soon up around 2 points. A large short interest is reported trapped in Case, but it appears to be stubborn. Case reacted later.

Traders Disinclined to Wade in Deeply

With only one full session before the Independence Day double holiday, traders in all sections of the market were not inclined to wade in deeply today, or to increase their speculative holdings of either stocks or commodities.

Independent Oils Are Given Whirl

Texas Corporation, Sinclair and other independent oils soon advanced about a point today on merger reports and further proration of crude oil flows.

Higher Prices Are Made by Utilities

United Corporation, Electric Power, Columbia and Consolidated Gas led the way to higher prices in the utility group during rallying periods.

Placing of Stops Is Urged by Some

A more cautious attitude is indicated on the part of conservative interests. They are advising clients to place stop-orders against their long positions, but are urging against adopting the short side. Some of them have been recommending that customers be prepared to take most of their available profits on long stocks during a bulge which is expected to follow announcement of a debt agreement.

General Electric's Strong Position

Although the increase in General Electric earnings was interrupted last year by general business conditions and results this far in 1931 also have not been highly encouraging, the company is in a strong position in its field. This fact explains the high selling ratio toward current earnings. Accounting policies of the management are recognized as highy conservative and the practice of ploughing back earnings into subsidiaries has been followed right along.

Penick & Ford's Second Quarter

In quarters close to Penick & Ford it is predicted that results for the second quarter will be much better than those for the first three months, when a poor showing was made. These interests anticipate progressive improvement during the remainder of the year and insist that they would not be surprised if the company could show earnings for the current 12 months of approximately $3 a share.

National Steel's Dividend Covered

With the second quarter ended there will be more talk of earnings of the various steel companies for the period. It is certain that many unfavorable reports will come out because of the low rate of production and the unsatisfactory prices prevailing in the quarter. National Steel is expected to cover its dividend of 50 cents a share for the three months with a small balance to spare.

The company has been one of the exceptions in the steel industry and was able to show 89 cents a share in the first quarter when most other steel companies failed to cover common dividend needs by a wide margin.

Brockton Edison Gets Fresh Issue

Department of Public Utilities has approved issuance by the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Brockton at $40 a share of 19,368 additional shares of $25 par capital stock. The company had sought approval of an issue of 24,210 shares to be sold at $32 a share. In its decision the department says:

"We feel the price fixed by directors is so low as to be inconsistent with the public interest and fix the price at which such shares may be issued at $40 a share. On this basis we are of opinion that the issue of 19,368 shares at $40 a share will be adequate to meet the present requirements of the company."

Average Price of Steels Advanced

Dow-Jones average price for eight important iron and steel products advanced to $44.25 a gross ton, Pittsburgh, from $43.58 the preceding week, based on Iron Age quotations.

Bond Market Gains on Light Volume

New York, July 2—The bond market moved ahead irregularly today although activity in most issues was limited. Carrier liens were generally higher and more active than most other groups, but even among them the trading was concentrated pretty much along a few leading issues.

Another Advance in Zinc Is Announced

New York, July 2—One large seller has advanced price of zinc 10 points to four cents a pound. Other sellers, however, are still holding to 3.90 cents a pound for zinc for prompt shipment.

CURB MARKET IS NARROW

New York, July 2—Price changes were generally narrow in a dull curb market today. Some soft spots appeared. One of the latter was Stutz Motor, which developed weakness, although the selling was moderate. Industrials generally were steady. F. W. Woolworth, Ltd., was busy, although the large turnover had little effect on the quotation.

Electric Bond & Share approached 55 and then began to meet stock, with the result that the gain was about lost. American Gas & Electric held around 70 on most sales.

Vacuum was in fair demand for a time but other members of the group traded infrequently. Standard of Indiana firmed on relatively light transactions. Gulf eased.

Selling pressure against United Founders relaxed and the stock held around the previous close. Ungerleider Financial and Goldman Sachs trading were among the firmer investment trust shares.

Dividends

Tidewater Associated Oil directors omitted comon dividend due at this time. The common stock paid 30 cents early this year, and declared regular quarterly $1.50 preferred dividend last month.

* * *

Directors of American Machine & Foundry Co. have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 35 cents a share, payable Aug. 1 to stockholders of record July 17.

* * *

The regular quarterly dividend of 62½ cents a share was declared on the stock of International Cigar Machinery Co., payable Aug. 1 to stockholders of record July 17.

STOCK MARKET EASY IN DULL TRADING

New York, July 2—Stocks gradually reacted in Wall Street today, after early rallies had brought general advances of a point or so. Trading was dull as the market awaited news on the debt negotiations at Paris.

U. S. Steel, after rising to 104¼, dropped more than a point under the previous close, and there were equally moderate losses in American Can, Westinghouse, National Biscuit, Anaconda and American Telephone.

RAILS ARE LOWER.

Case and Union Pacific were down about 3 and Baltimore & Ohio 2. Sales totaled well under 1,500,000 shares.

With the approach of the holiday week-end, and the outcome of the debt negotiations still uncertain, traders were disinclined to take a position on either side of the market.

There was some bidding up of stocks before midday, and for a time advances of 1 to 2 points appeared in prominent shares, but after 12 o'clock the list eased off to around yesterday's final levels.

A few specialties, such as Johns-Manville, Beatrice Creamery, Worthington, and Caterpillar Tractor sold up 2 points or so before the first rally petered out.

Coppers were heavy from the start, with losses of a point or so appearing in Anaconda, Kennecott, and American Smelting. National Biscuit was again inclined to ease.

Publication of the Reichsbank's statement as of June 30 disclosed that with the $100,000,000 credit advanced by the Federal Reserve and other central banks, the German bank was barely able to meet the midyear credit and currency requirements and keep its reserve above the legal minimum of 40 per cent. On June 30, the reserve was reported at 40.1 per cent, against 40.4 a week previously.

ENGLISH RATE UNCHANGED

Predictions of a reduction in the Bank of England's discount rate from 2½ to 2 per cent proved premature. Although the bank's weekly statement showed impairment of reserve ratio as result of the midyear requirements, there has been no stringency in the London money market since Tuesday. Although no change was made this week, Wall Street is still inclined to look for a lower discount rate shortly.

The Wall Street money market remained surfeited with funds, despite the midyear settlements and the approaching holiday currency requirements. Call money held officially at 1½ per cent, but was offered in the outside market at 1.

Veterans in the street could not recall any previous mid-year settlement period in which funds have been so plentiful. This, of course, reflects the aggressive easy money policy of the Federal Reserve.

Corporate and trade news was meagre. The copper market remained at a standstill, with some metal offered at 8¼ cents a pound, indicating a loss of most of last week's rise from 8 to 9 cents. Large producers, however, still held to their price of 9 cents.

The wholesale gasoline market in Chicago was again firm, as proration plans for the East Texas field were believed to be making important progress. The trade now expects to see proration in effect within from 30 to 90 days.

Hopes of higher crude prices in the mid-continent field have been deferred, pending settlement of the East Texas problem.

Closing Is Strong on London Exchange

London, July 2—London Stock Exchange closed quiet today under the impetus of the generally strong tone that prevailed throughout the session. Brazilian bonds showed an advance of from two to three points.

Closing Improved on Berlin Boerse

Berlin, July 2—Trading fluctuated during the session on the Boerse and the turnover was small. The close was somewhat improved. Reichsbank closed at 137¾; Siemens Halske 158; I. G. Farben 138¼.

Closing Is Firm on Bourse in Paris

Paris, July 2 (AP)—Profit-taking today again failed to shake the generally firm tendency of the Bourse, speculators apparently remaining confident that there will be a favorable outcome to the Franco-American negotiations over the Hoover debt proposal.

The exchange opened firm, owing to favorable reports from foreign exchanges, receded a bit toward the end of the morning and closed firm.

So. Carolina Turns Down Bids on Bonds

For first time in history of South Carolina, all bids offered by banking houses for notes of state were rejected by the Governor. State offered $5,000,000 highway bonds. One bid was 4¾ per cent with premium of $80,650; another was 4¾ per cent with premium of $116,000 and third was 4½ per cent with premium of $10,000. Last mentioned was highest bid and made by First National Bank of New York and National City Co.

Canadian Building Higher During May

Canadian building activities in May surpassed all other months of 1931 and the total value of contracts awarded was $36,895,700, an increase of 62.5 per cent over April totals, according to a bulletin just made public by the Department of Immigration and Colonization of the Canadian Pacific railway.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

HIGH YIELD

Miss M. S., Boston—What is the outlook for Trans-america bought at higher levels? Is the dividend secure?

Ans.—Trans-america at current levels appears to be discounting a lower dividend rate. An official recently said if earnings proved insufficient this year a part of the large surplus could be used, to a reasonable extent, to maintain payments. Earnings of 79 cents a share in 1930 did not cover the current $1 dividend established October 25, 1930, as a reduction from $1.60 paid from September, 1929, following 150 per cent stock dividend.

SHOULD HAVE FACTS

O. M., Brookline—What is your opinion of buying 25 shares National Dairy Products at present prices? Is the stock a good investment?

Ans.—We must have facts about your circumstances to judge what you should buy. Dividends, with extras, have been paid on National Dairy Products from 1924; current $2.60 rate from January 2, 1931. Net for 1930 was $4.10 a share. An official recently said dividends were covered in the first quarter, but business is running somewhat below 1930.

WANTS FORECAST

M. M., Winchester—Do you look for any recovery in Trico Products? I have 50 shares at higher levels.

Ans.—We could not guess future prices for you. Trico Products has paid the current annual $2.50 dividend since January, 1928. Net for 1930 was $5.04 a share, contrasted with $6.66 in 1929. In the March quarter, $1.37 a share, against $1.53 in similar period of 1930. Earnings are dependent on conditions in the automobile industry.

MUCH LOWER

D. G., Melrose—What are the latest earnings for Johns-Manville? I am holding some of the stock at a loss.

Ans.—In the March quarter Johns-Mansville earned 13 cents a share, against 81 cents in similar period of 1930. In 1930 net income was equivalent to $3.66 a share, against $8.01 in 1929. Current $3 dividend has been paid from 1926. Whether it will be continued, under present conditions, is not known, but business lately has shown a large pickup.

NET DECREASED

J. M., Brockton—Is Standard Oil of New York a good purchase? I notice it is selling under 20.

Ans.—Standard Oil of New York is engaged in all branches of the petroleum industry, and earnings and dividend record have been excellent. Because of unusual business conditions, earnings last year did not cover the current $1.60 annual dividend paid from third quarter of 1926. Net was only 92 cents a share, against $2.23 in 1929.

REFICITS CONTINUE

D. H., Haverhill—Recently I noticed your column. Shall I hold Republic Steel or sell at a loss?

Ans.—We could not advise on taking losses. Republic Steel common is a speculation. An initial dividend of $1.24 was paid Aug. 1, 1930; nothing since. The company is the third largest producer of steel in the United States, but operations for 1930 resulted in a net loss of $3,522,000, compared with net profit of $20,527,000 in 1929. In the March quarter a net loss of $1,692,593 contrasted with net income of $1,357,769 in corresponding period of 1930.

NET INVESTMENT

L. S., Somerville—What is your opinion of a purchase of United Founders at current levels.

Ans.—United Founders is a speculation. No cash dividends have been paid on the common stock, but the company had been distributing 1-80th of a common share quarterly since Jan. 2, 1930. Payment expected April 1, 1931, was omitted. If you want to make an investment, let us know the sum you can spend.

SHOWED DECLINE

M. R., Falmouth—What are the latest earnings for Julius Kayser? What do you think of a purchase?

Ans.—For six months ended December 31, 1930, earnings of Julius Kayser were equal to $1.27 a share, compared with $2.73 for similar period in 1929; for fiscal year ended June 30, 1930, $1.92 a share. May 1, 1931, the stock was put on the current $1 annual basis, contrasted with $2.50 and $4 a share paid from August, 1929. It is a speculation.

GENERAL MOTORS

L. E. E., Waltham—What did General Motors do in the past year?

Ans.—If you mean by the past year the year 1930, General Motors Corp., in its pamphlet report, shows net charges, depreciation and federal taxes of $153,766,246 excluding company's proportion of earnings of subsidiaries, against $245,970,393 in 1929.

Net after charges and federal taxes, including company's proportion of earnings and losses of subsidiaries not consolidated but accruing to General Motors Corp. in excess of dividends received, was $141,616,131 in 1930. Including non-recurring profit of $9,482,861 which resulted principally from sale to General Motors Management Corp. of 1,375,000 shares of General Motors Corp. common stock, total net earnings amounted to $151,098,992, the same as shown in the preliminary statement. After deducting preferred dividends balance is equal to $3.25 a share on 43,500,000 shares of common stock. This compares with $248,282,268 net in 1929, or $5.49 a common share after preferred dividends.

A SPECULATION

E. L., Framingham—As a reader of your paper I want advice. How about a purchase of Warner Brothers Pictures at current levels?

Ans.—Warner Brothers Pictures is a speculation on which we could not advise. Dividends suspended September, 1930, have not been resumed, nor have earnings shown improvement. Net for six months ended February 28, 1931, was 23 cents a share, contrasted with $3.63 in similar previous period. Earnings for fiscal year ended August 30, 1930, were equal to $2.26 a share, compared with $6.33 in 1929.

Mister Coolidge says it would be a good thing for the country if everybody would stop thinking for two months during the summer.

It might not be good for the country—but it certainly would help the administration.

TODAY'S NEWS PICTURE

This is Biarritz B. Doakes, public spirited citizen, who is roller-skating to Washington to present the Postmaster-General with the Doakes Plan to pull the Postoffice Department out of the red by stimulating business. "My plan is simple," says Doakes. "All we need to do is get more people married. This will result in more discontented wives. And more discontented wives will result in more fan letters to radio crooners. Of course, this may result in more radio crooners—but the government pest control has never failed in a crisis."

MORAN HITS DALLINGER

Senator James G. Moran, of Mansfield, chairman of the legislative committee which brought in the congressional redistricting bill, is biding his time on the criticism directed against the committee membership by Congressman Dallinger. Teachers' Salaries

Of all the "quack" remedies thus far proposed to relieve the economic depression in this country, the worst is that which calls for the reduction of the salaries of school teachers.

Trained economists will tell you that you cannot hope to revive business and hasten the return of prosperity by resorting to arbitrary wage cuts, because cutting wages reduces buying power upon which prosperity depends.

Official records will tell you that teaching is today, and always has been, one of the most underpaid professions in this country.

Your own sense of justice will tell you that it is most unjust to reduce the incomes of those least able to bear the loss.

Every day during our school year, 25,000,000 children go to school to 800,000 teachers in this country.

Whether this army of young Americans are well or badly taught, whether the money spent on their education is a good or bad investment, depends chiefly upon the teachers to whose guidance their pupils are committed during school hours.

To increase the economic disadvantage of our teachers is, in the warning words of the officers of the National Education Association:

"TO STRIKE THE SCHOOLS AT THEIR MOST VULNERABLE POINT AND TO WEAKEN THE ONE INSTITUTION WHICH CAN CONTRIBUTE MOST TO THE RECOVERY OF PROSPERITY."

In many States today well-trained teachers are unable to obtain teaching positions because there is an over-supply of poorly-trained teachers.

Instead of reducing the salaries of all teachers, now is the time to raise the salary of the trained teacher and organize a public demand for a trained teacher in every schoolroom.

"Every human institution," said Ralph Waldo Emerson, "is the lengthened shadow of a man."

And every school is the lengthened shadow of its teachers.

Killed by Friends

"The Night Before the Fourth"

A tombstone in an old New England cemetery bears this inscription to the young lady who was the belle of the town:

"To the memory of one who died at the hand of friends."

The facts were these:

It was her wedding eve. She went to the town wharf to welcome friends returning from a long cruise. It was also the "Night Before the Fourth."

In their patriotic and civic enthusiasm, the returning voyagers fired a discharge from the cannon mounted on the deck. The cannon contained old nails and iron fragments. The beautiful young lady who was to be married on the morrow was instantly killed.

That story is an epic of carelessness and riotous patriotism.

Tomorrow night is the "Night Before the Fourth."

Accidents and casualties reach their peak on this holiday. Auto collisions, drownings and fires supplement the mortality and injury lists from high explosives.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES.

DRIVE CAREFULLY.

DON'T FOOL WITH FIREWORKS AND FIREARMS.

DON'T RUN UNNECESSARY RISKS IN SWIMMING OR BATHING.

Children WILL have their fireworks and good times so long as childhood exists and so long as patriotism exists in this country.

Fathers and mothers will save them many burns and bruises, anguished suffering and possibly death itself if they take part in and supervise these innocent funmakings of the children that are actually freighted with danger.

Let us celebrate with proper care and avert the necessity of writing epitaphs to those who die at the hand of friends.

The Strange Gallo Case

And the Death Chair

The strange case of Samuel Gallo exhibits the frailties of human nature in its application of that evanescent thing we call criminal justice.

Joseph Fantasia was murdered in the North End. "Fantasia," meaning fantastical, visionary, unreal, was a name curiously suited to the extraordinary developments which followed.

Gangi Cero was convicted of the murder of Fantasia and was sentenced to die in the electric chair. Within nine hours of electrocution, he was freed by Governor Fuller.

Gallo, his erstwhile friend and employer, sought to prevail upon a major witness in the case to alter his testimony, and was sentenced to serve two years for contempt of court.

Subsequently, Cero and Gallo were jointly tried for the murder. Cero was exonerated of the crime for which he almost paid the penalty with his own life. Gallo was convicted as the actual murderer.

Now, in the death house, awaiting execution, Gallo is found to be insane. His status before the law will puzzle the Governor and the courts.

A higher justice than the shifting, variable sentiments of man seems to have put its fingers into the case and shuffled the events like pawns on the chess board.

Is it any wonder that distinguished prelates such as Cardinal O'Connell and Bishop Lawrence and a host of thoughtful men and women in Massachusetts advocate elimination of the death chair? It is a symbol of savage punishment, not an instrument of unerring justice.

Old Age Assistance Tax

The following letter appeals to us as being an editorial in itself:

"Mansfield, June 29, 1931.

"Editor, Boston American:

"Am in receipt of the Old Age Assistance Tax for $1.

"Why can't a sufficient tax, say $3, be imposed on all taxpayers, so that any person who reached the age of seventy years may receive at least $40 per month, providing, of course, they have no other income? Medical attention should also be furnished free.

"I regret very much to have to make this humanitarian appeal, but feel that justice to our aged friends demands a better championship than our representatives give them.

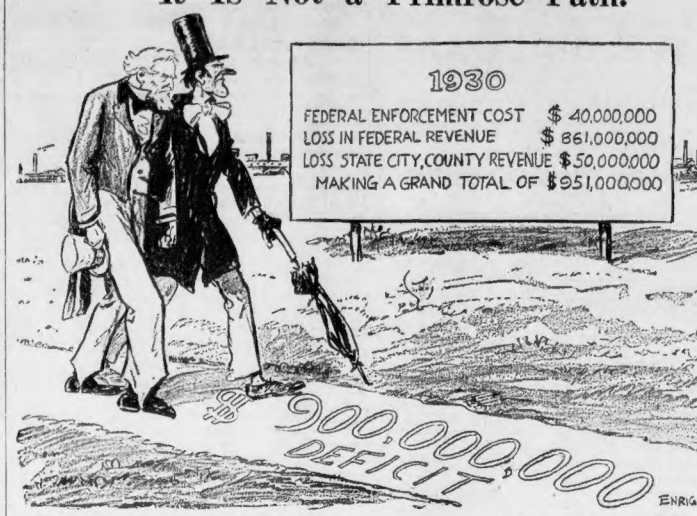
"It looks too cheap for a great Commonwealth like ours to engage in peanut policies at the expense of those we all love so well. Let us all make an effort to have Christianity and humanity a workable business proposition.

"Very truly yours,

"Joseph T. Butterworth."

Don't you think so, too?

It Is Not a Primrose Path!



It is a weary, worn, dejected Uncle Sam that is being led by Prohibition down the NINE HUNDRED MILLION-DOLLAR DEFICIT PATH.

Because of the Prohibition folly the loss in city, county, State and Federal revenues from excise taxes in 1930 was in excess of the deficit which the Treasury faces.

And when you add a 40,000,000 cost of the attempt to enforce Prohibition, Uncle's partnership with the person at his left costs the country the staggering total of $951,000,000.

Restoration of healthful light wines and harmless beer would aid Uncle. Not only would it increase his revenues, but would aid unemployment, and, above all, would check the steadily increasing use of poisonous bootleg liquor now flooding the country.

In the interest of TRUE TEMPERANCE this nation should bring back light wines and beer.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Something to Sustain Us

AFTER THE FURY and desolation of the war, after the inertia and despair of a false peace, Erich Maria Remarque has his lonely hero say this in the new book—"THE ROAD BACK."

"Perhaps, sometimes, I shall find someone to go with me on a stage of the journey, but for all of it, probably no one. Perhaps I shall never be really happy again; but I shall probably never be wholly unhappy, either, for something will always be there to sustain me, be it merely my own hands, or a tree or the breathing earth."

Elsie Robinson

"Perhaps I shall never be really happy again, but I shall probably never be wholly unhappy, either"—it takes a great deal of living for a man to discover that. We start out in life with some expectations. Of course we anticipate dangerous and painful ordeals. Indeed, we demand them for our youthful ego is determined to live on the grand scale, and dangerous ordeals are both flattering and exciting. They make us feel like heroes and they keep us from being bored. And we're smart—we'll know how to regulate our ordeals so they'll never become a nuisance. We'll keep wonderful . . . always full of adventure and romance and challenge. Dark moments, perhaps, but splendid darkness. Never any ignoble resignation. High hearts and happy ones—that shall be our slogan. So we start.

Then, little by little, disillusion falls upon us. Nothing is quite as we thought it was going to be. Nothing is 100 per cent. Life, it seems, is mostly one shabby compromise after another. The great adventures go blah. The great challenges prove bloney.

"I SHALL NEVER BE REALLY HAPPY AGAIN!" we cry.

And at first, it seems that we cannot stand it. What's the use of going on with life that never gets anywhere, that has no perfect answers? No use—we decide. And yet we do go on. Hating, rebelling, snifflING with self-pity, snarling with resentment. Still we do go on. And, presently, if we have kept a fairly cool head and an open heart, we come upon that second truth:

"I SHALL PROBABLY NEVER BE WHOLLY UNHAPPY, EITHER; FOR SOMETHING WILL ALWAYS BE THERE TO SUSTAIN ME, BE IT MERELY MY OWN HANDS, OR A TREE, OR THE BREATHING EARTH."

Always something to sustain us—

Wise Sayings

Fasting is the diet of angels, the food and reflection of souls, and the richest and highest aliment of grace. —Lyth.

To be 70 years young is sometimes far more cheerful and hopeful than to be 40 years old. —Holmes.

Not those dramatic, heroic, volcanic things which we had expected—but some simple, common thing which we had quite overlooked in our days of magnificent anticipation. The quiet satisfaction of doing a good piece of work. The homely pleasure of walking in the rain, building a fire, planting a garden, listening to a bird. The comfort that lies in the smile of a friend—a dog's nose nuzzling the hand—a child's shy confidence.

If we are wise, we come to know the joy of these, not as make-shift compensations, but as the truly beautiful, sustaining and enduring rewards of life.

Out of our ignorance and emotional greediness, we had built a splendid dream of melodramatic adventure. But how long could we have endured such an existence if it had come to pass? How weary we would have grown of trying to keep up with it on our "off days"! And what would all that show-off smartness have got us anyway? This is better—truly better—for this quiet stream of happenings is Life. The other was only a fantasy—this is Life. There is a mysterious power in these gentle joys—like the power of gentle rain and quiet sunlight. Unconsciously they serve our growth. Slowly, but steadily, we strike root . . . going deeper and deeper into old, precious soil . . . beginning again . . . BEGINNING BETTER.

Just Folks

Nine Years Old

At nine a little girl begins
To beg her pa and ma for twins
Or if we can't arrange for two,
Another baby boy will do.
Or if we can afford the price
A little girl is sometimes nice,
But anyhow she often weeps
Because no babies come for "keeps."

At nine a little girl will shout
When older people are about
And rush into the room pell-mell
Her day's adventurings to tell.
Though older tongues may talking be She'll pay no heed to them, for she
Has something marvelous to state
Which positively cannot wait.

Nor look, nor shaking head, nor frown,
Can tone that nine-year spirit down.
So filled her world is with delight
She finds no time to be polite.
Where everything is bright and new,
So much there is for her to do,
That she forgets our good advice
And all our talk of being nice.

At nine years old a little girl
Has hair that will not stay in curl,
And legs so bruised and scratched that she
Is oft a sorry sight to see.
Her strength has just begun to flower,
She's into mischief every hour—
A victim of the awkward stage,
And yet it is a lovely age.

New York Day by Day

Easy to Interview

NEW YORK, July 2—It is axiomatic that the most influential citizen is not only the easiest for the reporter to see but to interview. Austerity slides away at the journalistic approach. Col. Lindbergh, truly and deservedly great, is a notable exception.

Reporters have cooled their heels in the outer offices of suddenly elevated upstarts and been immediately ushered into the presence of Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Chauncey Depew. This courtesy does not exist solely in commercial fields.

It applies to great actors, top-notch authors, poets and painters. On his recent visit Gilbert K. Chesterton won the good will of all the journalists—from ship news crew to the touring correspondents—by his graciousness. And in return he received thoughtful consideration.

Maude Adams would not see reporters but her declensions were amiable. She was never abrupt. If letters were sent asking an interview they were invariably answered politely. It was explained interviews were never granted. Her wishes were respected by reporters and by photographers.

It is the insolent person who finds the going rough with the newspaper crowd. Once they have been treated discourteously they are like the elephant aggrieved. They never forget. And often this resentment is carried on for years in a conspiracy of silence.

Irvin Cobb's story, "The Thunder of Silence" was based on the actual experience of the life of a Washington statesman. He not only snubbed correspondents but did not treat them fairly in news conferences. He was shunted to oblivion by being completely ignored.

* * *

The only vigorous opposition I ever met in interviewing was when a young cub in Dayton, O. My city editor sent me to question a rather prominent citizen who had married and chambered a nifty nautilus of his mother's former parlor maid. At the first question ne leapt from his desk, snook me as the terrier does the rat and sent me spinning into a corner. That experience focused all my ambitions on ultimately doing only inside work.

* * *

The most agreeable interview I ever had was with the British humorist of Jerome K. Jerome. He not only furnished me with a couple of crack anecdotes applicable to the times but when the piece appeared dropped a complimentary note to the publisher about it that won a $2 weekly raise. And did I need it!

* * *

The season has been toughest in history along the Rialto. In every block in Broadway environs one stumbles into groups of well-known players at liberty. They try to be casual, sometimes farcical about it, but the pace is beginning to produce a face strained look. Most of them drift from Lindy's to Ma Gerson's to the curb of the Palace and various coffee lots, drowning despair in cauldrons of java. This afternoon I encountered a monologist on 7th avenue. "Going off this week?" I inquired. "This week?" he replied. "Name any week!"

* * *

The hang-outs of theatrical folk are always engaging. I usually seek them when dining out. Actors express the human frailties most of us would like to indulge but lack the courage. It is their easy mode of living more than their acting that supplies the magic of the theater to me. I get a kick just following George M. Cohan around in the manner of the dog after the covered wagon.

* * *

I dropped over to clip my bond today and found it in another sinking spell, and breathing heavily. Powerful influences seem to be keeping that bond from amounting to anything. I'm beginning to suspect Morgan and that crowd.

Great Wealth Makes Us Smooth

But Does It Improve Us? 'Hardly

You have read of Solly Joel, who died recently, a man of fashion, magnificent residences, fine stable of racehorses, large following of assiduous friends and fawners.

Here you see him, in the heyday of his wealth, which, when he died, amounted to $60,000,000, after he had given away a great deal and spent a great deal.

SOLLY JOEL, WHO RECENTLY LEFT $60,000,000, WITH HIS LITTLE DOG, STILL ALIVE.

This interesting picture shows how wealth makes us smooth (in appearance and in fact), gives us confidence in ourselves, dresses us beautifully.

But some things it CAN'T do. It can't enable us to eat or drink more than others without injuring ourselves.

It cannot enable us to enjoy the sky at night, or feel, as we look at it, the intense emotion of a young boy or girl just starting out in life.

Wealth can buy flattery but not LOVE.

It increases fear of death and suspicion of others. It does not let us know who is sincere.

However, wealth is comfortable, and here is Solly Joel thoroughly enjoying it, gloves and cane in one hand, leash for his little dog in the other, beautifully and carefully dressed by his valet.

A more interesting picture would show Solly Joel when he left the little public house, kept by his father in London, and went to South Africa to make his fortune.

You know his story—how the natives that found diamonds would sell them only to the old Boer farmers that could talk their language. How the Boers would not tell which natives had diamonds for sale.

Offering a ridiculously high price, Solly Joel bought an old, rickety white horse from an old Boer diamond dealer who had no other horse. Joel said he had to go somewhere in a great hurry.

He took the horse home, and, in the morning, long before daylight, he went back to the house of the old Boer, got on the horse at the Boer's gate and let the reins loose.

The old horse, like a milk horse on its route, took him to every native that had diamonds for sale, and Solly Joel bought them, paying a bigger price than the Boers ever paid, obtaining knowledge that was the foundation of his fortune. He was a diamond king and a gold king, and he left TWELVE MILLION POUNDS.

Do not envy him, however. He had to leave it all—even the dog.

At this moment he is just an ordinary angel, such as all the rest of us will be, whether we leave twelve million pounds or only affectionate remembrance.

Edgar the Right Man

Charles L. Edgar of the Boston Edison has been appointed to a national committee which will seek to stabilize employment in the light and power industry.

Edgar, probably due to his old associations with Thomas A. Edison, has been responsible for the adoption of many of the mechanical inventions which have refined the art of producing electricity and given America its world supremacy in that field.

His creation of recreational facilities for the employes, of the thrift clubs and educational opportunities for them would indicate that he brings an amiable state of mind to his national task.

The power industry has many shortcomings. Its propaganda processes, as revealed in the Federal Trade Commission, were at times detestable. But common justice requires the statement that it has endeavored to furnish employment through the depression period as well if not better than any other great industry.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?

7. One swallow does not	thy purse can buy.
8. 'Tis heaven alone that	was on sea or land.
9. My good blade carves	make a Summer.
10. Costly thy habit as	loveth best.

Mark each statement "True" or "False":

12. Cathay is an old name for China.
13. "She Stoops to Conquer" is by Sheridan.
